Hannity to interview Trump

Fox host will visit Morgantown, tape show in front of audience

BY BEN CONLEY

The Dominion Post

Representatives from Fox News Channel confirmed on Saturday that Sean Hannity will tape an interview with President Donald Trump in Morgantown's Metropolitan Theatre on Wednesday.

According to information presented to The Dominion Post, "Sean Hannity and President Trump will discuss tax reform, the economy and news of the day."

The interview, for the show "Hannity," will be taped for a later prime time presentation.

A Fox News representative told The Dominion Post that the taping will be closed to the press and recorded in front of a live audience comprised of Democrats, Independents and Republicans.

An email was originally sent by a Fox News representative to Susan Riddle, of the Greater Morgantown Convention and Visitors Bureau, on Friday, asking if Riddle was "willing to help in finding people interested in attending our show on Wednesday."

Riddle forwarded the information on to about 35 officials and entrepreneurs — one of whom forwarded it to The Dominion Post.

How two theaters staged comebacks

The Dominion Post

In 2018, another historic theater based in north-central West Virginia will re-open its doors.

The City of Clarksburg is restoring and renovating the Robinson Grand Performing Arts Center and plans for the theater's formal season to kick off in September 2018, with a soft opening in April.

In 2014, the city acquired the downtown property — which first opened in 1913 — and, before construction, invested $2.5 million in the facility. The budget to revitalize and renovate the space is $15 million.

"We've had support in funding this project," Executive Director Ryan Tolley, who was hired in July, said. "Especially for a city like Clarksburg, we're very capable, but that's a big investment, and we have spread that investment out among a number of things."

The public-private partnership took advantage of historic federal and state tax credits and is in the middle of the private phase of its capital campaign. Tolley said a little less than $2 million of the $4 million-$5 million goal has been raised. Another source of support is a 2016 Series A Bond to provide working capital.

Maria reporting raises echoes of Katrina coverage

Associated Press

NEW YORK — As the days pass since Hurricane Maria ripped across Puerto Rico, television reports increasingly echo those after Katrina a dozen years ago in sounding the alarm for a desperate population frustrated by the pace of relief efforts. The question is: How many people are listening this time? The words were blunt by the usually easygoing Bill Weir on CNN: "This is a humanitarian crisis the likes of which we have not seen for a long time." His report, though, came 20 minutes into a Jake Tapper newscast that was led by political developments in the United States.

The story has struggled to get the attention of predecessor hurricanes Harvey and Irma, which struck the U.S. mainland. The emotional plea of San Juan Mayor Carmen Yulin Cruz on Friday felt like a turning point, although it was overshadowed in the news by the resignation of President Donald Trump's health secretary, Tom Price.

So far, NBC's Lester Holt was the only broadcast network anchor to report on the storm from Puerto Rico, a telling measure of the story's importance to news executives. Puerto Rican developments led NBC's "Nightly News" each night this past week; on ABC's "World News Tonight," it was the lead story once.

Wind and rain stinging Chris Cuomo's face was a defining image of Hurricane Irma coverage from Florida. Yet until Anderson Cooper arrived on Friday, Maria hadn't attracted cable news' marquee stars.

In a report from central Puerto Rico this week, CNN's Leyla Santiago repeatedly emphasized that residents were U.S. citizens. A native of the island who now lives on the mainland, she's aware how many people don't know that. After the storm, many Puerto Ricans raised the citizenship issue when expressing surprise that relief efforts seemed sluggish following such a ferocious storm.

"I've heard it many times we're Americans, too," Santiago said.

It's fair to wonder how much of an influence this has had on interest in the story in both homes and newsrooms.

One measurement starkly brings this to light. When Harvey struck Texas, The Weather Channel's audience peaked at 1.1 million viewers on Aug. 25, the Nielsen company said. It hit a record-setting 3.3 million on Sept. 10 with Irma's landfall. The network's biggest audience for Maria coverage was 494,000.

The Weather Channel stationed 11 on-air meteorologists in Florida for Irma coverage. Only Paul Goodloe went to Puerto Rico. He's gone now. Any Maria stories on the network now come from corporate colleagues at NBC News.

Dubai dreams of flying taxi industry

Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates With a whirling buzz from 18 rotors, the pilotless helicopter gently lifted off the ground and soared into the afternoon sky, the spire of the world's tallest building visible behind it.

The recent unmanned flight by the German-made electric Volocopter represents the latest step in Dubai's pursuit of flying taxis, which would not seem out of place among the Gulf city's already futuristic skyline — imagine "Blade Runner," with less rain.

Dubai already invested in another model of a flying, autonomous taxi, and is working to design regulations for their use. Putting more passengers in the air could free its al-

WVU institute first to insert device

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The WVU Heart and Vascular Institute is the first center in the United States to implant the HAART 200 aortic annuloplasty device for bicuspid aortic valve repair, invented by Heart and Vascular Institute surgeon Dr. J. Scott Rankin.

A bicuspid aortic valve (BAV) is a common congenital heart malformation in which the valve has only two leaflets instead of the usual three. Most people with BAV develop aortic insufficiency, or a leaking valve, and need a valve replacement between ages 40 and 60.

The HAART 200 device, which received FDA approval in August, is a rigid ring that reshapes and reinforces the patient's existing valve rather than replacing it. The device, manufactured by BioStable Science & Engineering Inc., is the only commercially available device designed for repairing bicuspid aortic valves.

"These new rings provide a significant advancement in our armamentarium for our primary aortic valve repair program at WVU," said Dr. Vinay Badhwar, executive chair of the Heart and Vascular Institute.

Badhwar, Rankin and Dr. Lawrence Wei, director of the Center for Aortic Valve Disease and co-director of the Center for Aortic Surgery, performed the surgery recently. The patient is recovering well.

The Center for Aortic Valve Disease is focused on providing innovative therapies, including transcatheter, sutureless, minimally invasive and autologous reconstructive solutions, and is among the most advanced centers in the nation.

"Surgical repair of the bicuspid aortic valve can be a complex, three-dimensional problem because of variability in the valve anatomy," Rankin said. "Implantation of the HAART 200 Aortic Annuloplasty Device conforms the native valve to the three dimensional shape of the device, creating a circular valve geometry and aligning the leaflet commissures into the preferred 180 degree orientation. Conforming the native valve to this shape simplifies assessment and reconstruction of the valve leaflets and creates a central flow pattern of blood through the valve, which may improve the long-term durability of the repair."

In June, the same team of surgeons became the first in the U.S. to place the HAART 300 Aortic Annuloplasty Device, also invented by Rankin. The device is used to repair the more common tricuspid aortic valve.

Mon Health implants smallest pacemaker

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Physicians with the Mon Health Heart and Vascular Center became the first in north-central West Virginia to implant the Micra Transcatheter Pacing System, the world's smallest pacemaker.

About the size of a vitamin capsule, the pacemaker is a tenth the size of a traditional pacemaker and doesn't involve multiple lead wires to deliver a jolt of energy to the heart. Rather, it can be implanted right into the heart with a catheter.

"Conventional pacemakers are implanted just under the skin below the collarbone, and require electrodes to be inserted through a large vein into chambers of the heart." said Dr. John Lobban, a cardiologist who specializes in irregular heart rhythms at Mon Health Heart and Vascular Center. "But the leadless pacemaker is implanted directly onto the heart's right ventricle chamber and uses prongs to generate heart-regulating electrical impulses."

The Micra Transcather Pacing System is a big win for patients like 81-year-old Evangeline Cain, of Elkins. She was the first patient to undergo the procedure.

"I can really tell a difference in how I feel with the pacemaker being in. I now feel the way I'm supposed to," Cain said. "The staff was excellent with me and I appreciated it because when you're that sick, you don't realize how good it is to receive that kind of care. I trusted Dr. Lobban. He talked me through the process of how the pacemaker worked and how it would be placed, which I appreciated." The leadless pacemaker is ideal for patients with atrial fibrillation and slow heart rate who require single-chamber ventricular pacing.

"The procedure to implant the small, leadless pacemaker is less invasive, reducing recovery time and the risk of complications compared to devices," traditional Lobban said. "The average expected recovery time is between 24 hours and two days."

The procedure could potentially benefit 30-40 Mon Health patients a year.

Patients with bradycardia or atrial fibrillation should talk with their cardiologist about the benefits and risks.

complaint to rectify the situation, including payment of attorney fees and reimbursement of the commission's hearing costs.

Further, the commission can order the payment of "any other legal or equitable relief as the commission deems appropriate." It goes on to state, "Such order shall be accompanied by findings of fact and conclusions of law sufficient to permit review by any court of competent jurisdiction."

The Dominion Post asked City Attorney Ryan Simonton if the human rights commission actually has the authority to make a city resident take part in such a process.

"I don't think the intent is to compel working with the Commission, but employers, property owners, and operators of public accommodations have an opportunity to be proactive and insulate themselves from claims by reporting discrimination," Simonton said, noting that there would be "opportunities to participate in informal and confidential conciliation" before the issue would be made public.

Councilor Ron Dulaney had the same question, asking, "When I get all the way to the end of this, what if someone just doesn't comply? What happens next?"

Simonton's answer seemed to indicate that if the HRC determines that someone engaged in discriminatory behavior but won't participate, "there's also the option to correctly seek to have a court of general jurisdiction, like our circuit court, enforce that ... and direct a person to act."

was why council's oversight of the HRC's bylaws will be removed as part of the change.

Another question raised

Councilor Barry Wendell said he supports the change, explaining the HRC should have autonomy to form its own laws.

"We have a very supportive, good council here, but I can see in the future how that might not be the case," Wendell said. "I would like this commission to have some autonomy and not be subject to the whims of a future council."

Exemptions for "private clubs" is another issue that raised questions as members of council asked Simonton if the city could close the private club "loophole."

"Private clubs are, in some instances, allowed to include only certain groups whereas places of public accommodation, housing and those types of facilities cannot do that," Simonton said. "It's sort of in the nature of private clubs to be exclusive."

THEATER

maintains the property, the Cultural Foundation of Harrison County is handling all of the donations and fundraising.

"So the money is actually coming through them," Tolley said. "And then they help to fund our various events that we're going to have."

While Tolley is now a city employee, the goal is for the theater to eventually stand on its own.

"I believe in the next few years," Tolley said of a timeframe for the switch. "But nothing is necessarily set. They don't want to call it too soon, as the city wants to be very supportive of the project and wants to ensure we have all we need for success."

He is determining a base operating budget and the number of staff it will take to run the center.

The Met

This is a different management scenario than that of the Metropolitan Theatre.

The High Street venue was purchased by the Metropolitan Theatre Foundation in 1994 and transferred to the city in 2003.

Last year, the city and WVU partnered for a oneyear pilot collaboration in which the university was a managing partner for the theater.

That partnership expired in June, and City Manager Paul Brake and the College of Creative Arts Dean Paul Kreider came to a new arrangement.

The College of Creative Arts is no longer a managing partner, but faculty and administrators provide consulting services on technical operations and operations management as needed. The value of the services is $15,000; they are provided in exchange for 20 free dates at the theater.

The Met's finances and management are under the purview of the citv manger's office, and with the recommendation of Brake, Morgantown City Council unanimously approved a $213,900 base operating budget for the theater in July.

"At this time, we're looking at establishing the theater, at least for now, as another city department until we determine, perhaps, some other administrative structure," Brake said at the time.

Running the Met

Joe Kaehler, the Met's

managed the theater since it re-opened. He oversees seven part-time employees, including sound engineers and lighting designers.

"All of us do general maintenance and cleaning and things like that," he said. "We run it lean and mean."

The Metropolitan Theatre Commission, a volunteer city board, advises the city manager's office in operations, maintenance, theater upgrades and programming. Kaehler gives input to the board.

While the commission's focus is on the Met, Kaehler said there's been discussion of the group taking on the broader role of overseeing arts and culture in the area.

In that scenario, he said, "They would oversee the amphitheater, the Met, the museum and any other venues that would fall into that category and also work on funding.

"And that funding isn't state, federal and local government funding as much as it is corporate funding, because the government funding is a sliding scale constantly."

He explained that publicly owned theaters are an investment, but not typically money-making ventures. However, he said, that doesn't mean they don't provide value to the community.

"Right now, we have a city council and city manager who are saying, you know, maybe we need to invest in [the Met] to get back what we can," Kaehler said. "The university did a study on the economic impact of the arts and there are millions of dollars a year in economic impact."

The study to which Kaehler is referring is a 2007 report that Arts Monongahela commissioned the WVU Bureau of Business and Economic Research to conduct.

It estimated that arts patrons directly spend $2.8 million in the Monongalia County economy annually, generating a total economic impact of more than $4 million in the county.

The cost of theatre

In summer 2016, the university conducted an economic impact study on the Robinson Grand and estimated during the first five years of operation it will produce more than $367,000 in tourism-related spending in Harrison County.

And while Clarksburg is expected to spend $21 mil-only full-time employee, has lion in construction and operational costs for the Robinson Grand, that spending will bring more than 50 cents in economic activity to Harrison County for every dollar spent by the center.

> In its first year of operation, the Robinson Grand plans to host a number of local performances, including school and college showcases, as well as national and regional acts.

> "One of my biggest priorities is helping build those connections and build a synergy among the area and artists here and other theater companies, because I want to promote large concerts and big events but also want it to be a community theater and theater that everyone can take part in," Tolley said.

> A similar sentiment is shared by Kaehler, who said that the Met works closely with WVU, area schools, and local theater and dance companies.

> "It works out perfectly because it brings a lot of people downtown and brings the spending money downtown," he said.

In terms of larger shows, he said he's in talks with promoters, like those who bring shows to the Palace Theatre in Greensburg, Pa.

"It's a little easier to get touring acts there, because they're a third bigger," he said. But, he added, "I've had really good conversations with those promoters. And they love the place."

He said he's booking now for dates in 2020.

And while the Met was built in 1924, before the existence of amplification, a new sound system was gradually installed over the past six years.

"It's flawless," he said. "I think we have the best sound system in the state."

Old buildings

There are other issues that can arise from the building's age. For instance, it was built before the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) existed, and therefore does not have to comply with the same standards as new construction.

"But we've never turned anyone away," Kaehler said. "There is handicap seating. The slope of the theater is 7.5 degrees, which is steep if you're in a wheelchair, but we always accommodate. You cannot get to the balcony. There's no elevator or no place to put an elevator, but we will find you a seat or create seats for you on the main floor."

compliant.

"We've already had inquiries for wedding and birthday parties," Tollev said.

In 1927, the Robinson Grand was one of only 13 theaters in the United States to be wired for sound and showed movies. That tradition will continue, as the center invested in a large-scale digital projection system.

"We think it will be a great filler between large events," Tolley said.

Since re-opening in 2003, the Metropolitan has undergone a facelift of its own. In 2010, the $4 million renovation project (which includes the cost of purchasing the building) was completed. The marquee outside the theater was replaced. Inside, the Met was repainted and new plasterwork, curtains and railings were put in.

More recently, new carpet was installed, at a cost of about $23,500.

Maintaining the place

Kaehler presented a $500,000 deferred maintenance plan to city council this year.

"That's a projection of what it's going to cost to repair the things that typically wear out in a big building—heating, air conditioning, ventilation that kind of stuff needs repaired constantly," he said.

In fact, he said, parts of the HVAC system have met the end of their life cycle. So, that is a priority.

"There's a savings in there," he said. "If you upgrade it, you will save money in the long run. It will pay for itself in a few years."

Ron Rittenhouse/The Dominion Post

The roof will also need to be updated.

'We have 22 years on a 15-year roof," Kaehler said.

Because the infrastructure was redone when the roof was first replaced, it will only need to be re-laid, rather than starting from scratch.

Seating is another item on the list.

"The seats are getting to the point where they need to be replaced," Kaehler said.

'People ask, why invest all kinds of money in this?" Kaehler said. "It's quality of life. How many cities wouldn't kill to have a performing arts center in their downtown?

"When I first came here, there were two restaurants down here. Now that's all there is. And it's not just college kids. People coming down here for our shows have tickets in their pockets and 50 bucks. They may get something to eat, maybe a drink afterward, and they're walking by little specialty shops. That's important money. And it adds up fast."

And, Tolley adds, there's the nostalgia factor.

"It keeps the history alive for many of the residents. ... We want to bring back that luster."

Title I success at Mountainview

Federal program helps at-risk kids on math, reading

BY WILLIAM DEAN

The Dominion Post

Title I funding allows educators at Mountainview Elementary to catch students that are falling behind early and get them back on track before problems multiply.

There are 10 groups of firstgrade children being helped by Title I-funded teachers. The numond grade. Only three such groups are in third grade at the school.

Educators point to that reduction as proof that Title I educational programs are working. Title I is a federal program that provides certain schools with extra assistance to help atrisk students improve their math and reading skills. Title I provides schools that have high percentages of students coming from low-income families with aid to help make sure all children meet the state academic standard.

The funding is part of the Elementary and Secondary Educaber drops to eight groups in section Act, signed into law by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965.

There are seven Title I schools in Monongalia County.

Norma Gaines, director of federal programs and elementary curriculum for the Monongalia County Board of Education, said a school with 40 percent or more students qualifying for reduced-price lunches is eligible for Title I funding.

Brookhaven, Eastwood, Mason-Dixon, Mountainview, Mylan Park, North and Skyview elementary schools all meet that requirement and receive funding.

The money comes from the U.S. Department of Education, Gaines said. It goes to the state Board of Education, which allocates the money as needed.

Monongalia County received $2.1 million for Title I this year.

The money must be spent on supplemental education and primarily goes towards staffing, providing 29 fully or partially funded employees, Gaines said.

The money is also used for extra books and materials, as well as getting parents involved with their children's education.

KINGWOOD— When someone says "Buckwheat Festival," the first thing that pops into many people's minds is the buckwheat cakes. Newburg resident Bernard Farrell said eating the cakes is a yearly tradition for him. "My grandkids drag me here every year," Farrell said. "But I enjoy coming and I get to meet some of my old friends. Robert and Melodie Haymes traveled from Charleston to visit. Melodie said this was their second year attending the festival.

"I love it," she said. "We come for the parades and to look at the crafts."

She said next on their list after seeing the crafts was a buckwheat cake and sausage dinner.

Local author Thomas Williams said he not only came to sell his books, but also to see friends and relatives. He said one of his favorite things about the festival is the parades.

"I grew up around here when I was a child," Williams said. "When I retired 10 years ago, I came back."

Williams is one of the volunteers who help with the Kingwood Volunteer Fire Department's breakfast every month. "We come to see the crafts and to buy popcorn," Morgantown residents Peggy and Lyndsey Gray said. Lyndsey said she enjoys coming to the festival.

Running tally aids veterans

Marathon's organizer 'couldn't be happier'

FULL RESULTS of the Morgantown Marathon, half-marathon and 8K run are on Pages 6-7B.

Area veterans will benefit from the growth of the Morgantown Marathon, which saw more than 800 athletes and many spectators descend on Morgantown last weekend.

"I honestly couldn't be happier than we were Saturday evening, after the race," organizer Jamie Summerlin said. "Our numbers were up this year, and even though the heat was up, everyone seemed to have a good energy."

The trio of long-distance races, which began in 2015, generate money for Operation Welcome Home, a local nonprofit that aims to provide veterans of the U.S. Armed Forces rehabilitation services and support, mentorship, counseling, transitional and employment services.

"It's still going to be a couple weeks before we know what the numbers are, but we're going to be able to make a pretty significant donation to Operation Welcome Home," Summerlin said.

The runners tackled daunting courses for the marathon, halfmarathon and 8K runs.

The marathon's course traversed all seven wards of Morgantown, with the start/finish line at the WVU Coliseum.

Bryan Morseman, 32, of Bath, N.Y., paced the marathon field from the beginning, securing a six-minute lead by the halfway point. From there, he cruised to victory in 2:32:36, grabbing the gold medal in Morgantown for the second straight year. Morseman set a new course record by 54 seconds and ran a Boston Marathon-qualifying mark.

"Anytime you can run faster than you did the year before, it's a good thing," Morseman said. "I felt like I ran a good, well-gameplanned race last year, so I'm very satisfied with it."

In the women's division, Monicah Wahome, 30, grabbed the victory. Wahome finished with a time of 3:21:47, which earned her eighth overall.

Ballpark's beer fest scores with fans

BY BEN CONLEY

The Dominion Post

You can keep your peanuts and Cracker Jack. It's the beer that keeps suds worshipers coming back to Monongalia County Ballpark for the annual Home Run and Hops Craft Beer Festival.

Saturday marked the second iteration of the yearly festival, and a steady stream of brew enthusiasts shrugged off a chilly afternoon to sample more than 60 local, regional and premium beers. "We decided that this is an event that we wanted to put together for fun. It kind of caps off our baseball season and starts off the fall on a good note," Black Bears Assistant General Manager Jackie Riggleman said. "It's also another way to invite the community into the field and show that we can use it for more than just baseball."

Along with dozens of varieties of beer to sample, participants competed in a cornhole tournament, perused vendors and bopped around the bases to live music.

Students go through testing, and those who are struggling the most in math and reading are pulled aside for a "double dose" of learning, she said.

Barger said the children are put into groups with other students closest to their ability and that no group's plan is exactly like another.

"We build from the skills they have," said Tracy Goodwin, also a Title I teacher at Mountainview.

The extra learning comes in the form of guided reading, as well as giving students tips and tricks that can help them build their skills.

Collaboration each student's classroom teacher is also important to get the best results, Barger said.

Goodwin said they are blessed with good communication at Mountainview, which helps them keep on top of how individual students are doing.

Sept. 22, 2017. She was born March 14, 1934, in Moneta, Va., as the middle child of three children born to the late Rev. Alvin Archer Mason and Dasye Shelton Mason.

Liz was active in her community from a young age. Most notably, she achieved national prominence with 4-H projects in her hometown and was honored at a dinner attended by President Harry S. Truman in 1951. She attended Mary Washington College, in Fredericksburg, Va., and received a bachelor's in music in 1954. She went on to complete a master's in teaching at George Peabody College, in Nashville. Tenn.

sue of Special Obligation Highway Notes, a technique that advanced the completion of I-64 by three years and also allowed for early completion of many other

He co-wrote and produced the video "Therapy and Beyond: Aquatic Therapy for Spinal Cord Injuries" for the School of Medicine at WVU. In establishing his Endowment for Treatment of Paralysis, he hoped to better the life of all paralyzed people in north central West Virginia, if only in some small way.

Upon joining the Advisory Committee of the Mary Babb Randolph Cancer Center, he proposed that students at the WVU Journalism School interview cancer patients. The project, "Cancer Stories: Lessons in Love, Loss and Hope," premiered in 2003 as an hourlong documentary on West Virginia public television. The documentary won the Midwestern Regional Emmy Award for Information Programming. The companion book, published in 2005 by the WVU Press, closes with "Listening for Cancer Stories," the chapter written by Mr. Allen.

Mr. Allen, a lacrosse player while at VMI, believed that athletic competition was an integral part of education. He served on the Board of Governors of organizations that raise funds for athletic scholarships. He donated the first racing shell for the WVU women's crew team when that sport achieved varsity status, in 2000.

Mr. Allen operated a cattle farm and served as a director of the Lowndes Bank, CB&T Financial Corp., and Heritage Bank, of Harrison County. He was a president of the Appalachian Blacksmiths Association and edited their newspaper for several years.

He was a frequent contributor to the West Virginia State Journal, writing about politics and economics.

Trump lashes out at San Juan mayor

Associated Press

BRANCHBURG, N.J. — President Donald Trump on Saturday lashed out at the mayor of San Juan and other officials in stormravaged Puerto Rico, contemptuous of their claims of a laggard U.S. response to the natural disaster that has imperiled the island's future.

"Such poor leadership ability by the Mayor of San Juan, and others in Puerto Rico, who are not able to get their workers to help," Trump said in a series of tweets a day after the capital city's mayor appealed for help "to save us from dying."

"They want everything to be done for them when it should be a community effort," Trump wrote from his New Jersey golf club.

The tweets amounted to a biting response to San Juan Mayor Carmen Yulin Cruz, who had accused the Trump administration of "killing us with the inefficiency" after Hurricane Maria. She implored the president, who is set to visit the U.S. territory on Tuesday, to "make sure somebody is in charge that is up to the task of saving lives."

Trump repeatedly praised the residents of Florida, Louisiana and Texas, which were also by devastating storms, as strong and resilient, declaring at one point that Texas could "handle anything."

Trump pledged spare no effort to help Puerto Rico recover from Maria's ruinous aftermath, and tweeted that military personnel and first responders have done "an amazing job," despite having "no electric, roads, phones etc."

But after a week of growing criticism, the president's patience appears to be waning. His administration tried in recent days to combat the perception that he failed to quickly grasp the magnitude of Maria's destruction and gave the U.S. commonwealth less attention than he bestowed on states hit by Harvey and Irma.

After going days without mentioning the hurricane-devastated island after the storm, administration officials held press conferences describing their relief efforts and Trump has mentioned Puerto Rico at nearly every public event.

Thousands more Puerto Ricans received water and rationed food as an aid bottleneck began to ease. Telecommunications are back for about 30 percent of the island, but many remain desperate for necessities most urgently water long after the Sept. 20 hurricane.

Tillerson: U.S. has channels to talk directly to N. Korea

BEIJING — U.S. Secretary of State Rex Tillerson acknowledged on Saturday that the United State is maintaining direct channels of communications with North Korea, even as tensions rise over the North's nuclear and missile programs and the countries' leaders spar through bellicose name-calling.

Tillerson said the U.S. was probing North Korea's willingness to talk, and called for a calming of the situation on the Korean Peninsula, adding it was incumbent on the North to halt the missile launches.

"We have lines of communication to Pyongyang. We're not in a dark situation, a blackout," Tillerson told reporters during a visit to China. "We have a couple ... three channels open to Pyongyang. We can talk to them, we do talk to them."

No elaboration about those channels or the substance of any discussions came from Tillerson, who met with Chinese President Xi Jinping and other top officials in Beijing. While Tillerson affirmed that the U.S. would not recognize North Korea as a nuclear power, he also said the Trump administration had no intention of trying to oust Kim. "Despite assurances that the United States is not interested in promoting the collapse of the current regime, pursuing regime change, accelerating reunification of the peninsula or mobilizing forces north of the DMZ, North Korean officials have shown no indication that they are interested in or are ready for talks regarding denuclearization," U.S. State Department spokeswoman Heather Nauert said in a statement.

The Korean Peninsula remains in a technical state of war, and the Demilitarized Zone divides North and South Korea.

Amid outcry, new monuments are going up

ATLANTA — While Confederate statues and monuments around the nation get removed or defaced, some new memorials are being erected by people who insist their only purpose is to honor the soldiers who died for the South.

They say race has nothing to do with these monuments, unlike those erected in the early 20th century.

But the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says there's no way around the discriminatory meaning of such messages.

Death could lead to supplement's ban

ALBANY, N.Y. — Matt Dana was known where he grew up as a promising police sergeant who worked hard to root out narcotics dealers. So it came as a shock when he died suddenly this summer and an autopsy attributed it to an overdose.

It wasn't from drugs. but from kratom, an herbal supplement.

Dana's death resonated far beyond New York, striking fear among kratom advocates that it could be cited in an ongoing federal review to get it banned nationwide.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Police said at least 50 people were detained Saturday during a right-wing demonstration in Sweden's secondlargest city that left one police officer and several Police posted flyers before the march warning people not to act in a way reminiscent of German Nazis demonstrations in the 1930s and 1940s.

NATION & WORLD

SALT LAKE CITY — A top Mormon leader reaffirmed the religion's opposition to same-sex marriage on Saturday during a church conference - and reminded followers watching around the world that children should be raised in families led by a married man and woman no matter what becomes the norm in a "declining world."

Oaks, a member of a top governing body called the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, followed a push in recent years by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to uphold theological opposition to marriage amid widespread social acceptance while trying to foster an empathetic stance toward LGBT people.

The Mormon church is one of many conservative faith groups navigating the challenges that arise from trying to strike the right balance. "We have witnessed a rapid and increasing public acceptance of cohabitation without marriage and same-sex marriage. The corresponding media advocacy, education and even occupational requirements pose difficult challenges for Latter-day Saints," Oaks said. "We must try to balance the competing demands of following the gospel law in our personal lives and teachings even as we seek to show love for all."

Oaks acknowledged that this belief can put Mormons at odds with family and friends and doesn't match current laws, including the recent legalization of gay marriage in the United States. But he told the nearly 16 million members watching around the world that the religion's 1995 document detailing the doctrine — "The Family: A Proclamation to the World" — isn't a policy statement that will be changed.

After the Utah-based Mormon church received backlash in 2008 for helping lead the fight for California's Proposition 8 constitutional ban on gay marriage, religious leaders spent several years carefully developing a more empathetic LGBT tone.

That was interrupted in 2015, when the church adopted new rules banning children living with gay parents from being baptized until age 18.

Spain, Catalonia head for showdown over independence vote

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Montserrat Aguilera wasn't intending to vote for the Catalonia region to secede from the rest of Spain.

But the 52-year-old laboratory worker changed her mind amid an unprecedented crackdown by Spain's government as it tries to prevent today's independence referendum from going ahead.

Spain and its most powerful and prosperous region are headed for a showdown, with police trying to shut down polling stations to stop the referendum and activists, students and parents occupying schools designated as voting places to keep them open.

Much remains unclear, including whether police will forcibly remove people who are still in the polling stations and how many of Catalonia's voters will be able to cast ballots amid the government's crackdown.

Also unknown is what happens next if regional leaders declare any vote legitimate and Catalonia declares independence. The referendum was suspended under constitutional rules weeks ago so a court could consider its legality.

Turnout will be key, and if people like Aguilera are any indication, it could be high. She wanted a referendum to be held under constitutional rules so she could vote "no" and try to keep Spain and Catalonia united. Now, she wants Madrid to feel the pinch of the region's disgust.

Catalan authorities pledged to make the voting possible even if police, acting on judges' orders, manage to close polling stations and seal off ballot boxes. Some 5.3 million people are eligible to vote in the region.

The latest surge for independence started in 2010, when Spain's Constitutional Court struck down key parts of a charter that would have granted Catalonia greater autonomy and recognized it as a nation within Spain.

The rejection stung, and Spain's 2008-'13 financial crisis and the harsh austerity measures that followed generated more support for secession, with many Catalans feeling they could do better on their own. Catalonia contributes a fifth of the country's 1.1 trillion-euro economy.

If "yes" wins, Catalan authorities promised to declare independence within 48 hours. No minimum participation rate was set, but regional President Carles Puigdemont acknowledged that a significant turnout will be needed to declare the results legitimate.

In a mock referendum in 2014, only about 35 percent of Catalans voted.

Kids work with Cousteau

CUYAHOGA, Ohio — The Cuyahoga River is notorious for catching fire

try's top experts how to keep it from happening ever again.

Students spent the day as scientists recently completing the EarthEcho Water Challenge alongside Philippe Cousteau Jr. in the Cuyahoga Valley National Park, in honor of World Water Monitoring Day, on Sept. 18.

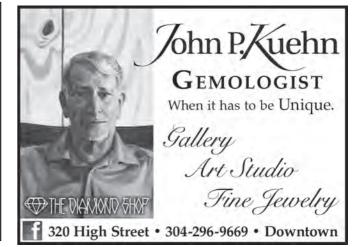

Kids often test the water quality in the park, but that Monday was the first time ever with Cousteau, the grandson of worldrenowned explorer, conservationist and water activist Jacques Cousteau.

The younger Cousteau is continuing his grandfalegacy mainly through his environmental organization called EarthEcho International, which contains a global water quality database with more than 2 million data points from almost 150 countries. The Earth-Echo Water Challenge is a series of water quality tests that people complete and enter into the database.

About 120 kids from five schools split off into different areas of the park to test the turbidity, phosphate levels, pH and dissolved oxygen levels in water from areas of the Cuyahoga River and its watersheds while learning about the health of the water and how to maintain it.

"I learned a lot. I didn't know you couldn't just drink water from a pond," 9-vear-old Mason Rovgrimes said.

KINGWOOD — Kingwood Elementary students are the first in West Virginia to participate in the Global Cardboard Challenge.

"It's cardboard chaos," Kingwood Elementary and Central Preston Middle Technology Integration Specialist Michelle

It's also creative play, and "they learn empathy, because we are dealing with a disability," she said.

The Challenge originated in 2012, when filmmaker Nirvan Mullick met 9-year-old Caine Monroy, who had built an elaborate cardboard arcade inside his dad's East Los Angeles auto parts shop. Mullick was Caine's first customer. He organized a flash mob of customers to surprise Caine and make his day, then made a film about it.

From that was born ima gination.org, which promotes creativity and entrepreneurship in children.

Kingwood Elementary students work on their design for the Cardboard Challenge.

This year, 15 third- and fourth-grade students at Kingwood took on the challenge of building arcade games. Each arcade game must be designed to cope with a different disability in the user.

"I saw it last year, and I thought that would be cool, so I applied," Liga said. "The kids think it's cool just doing something in cardboard. When you come in here and they're working, it's chaos in cardboard."

Lani Daugherty said the challenge was fun, but she and her partner were having some problems keeping the cardboard from being crushed. "It's KINGWOOD - A dance to benefit an organization that helps veterans is planned for Saturday.

Formed in 2005, Operation Second Chance began as a few people visiting and helping injured veterans and their families at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., according to the organization. Since then, it has grown to offer a variety of services to veterans nationally.

Wendi Lewis, of Terra Alta, heard about Operation Second Chance from Bobby Wolfe, who organized a poker run, dinner and dance last year to raise funds for the nonprofit.

After meeting an ambassador for the group and learning of its many programs, she and friends decided to organize a dance fundraiser this year.

Lewis said some of the instances they learned of where Operation Second Chance helped were giving local veterans money for gas to travel to and from doctor appointments, paying for a babysitter so someone could take a vet to the doctor and helping a veteran with rehabilitation expenses.

The dance, which begins 7 p.m. Saturday, at the Kingwood Eagles, is co-sponsored by the Preston Community Arts Center. Admission will be $5 a person. In addition to music by Paul Burger and the Virgins, there will be 50/50 drawings, door prizes and silent auctions.

Last year's event netted $1,000 for Operation Second Chance, despite rainy weather, and organizers hope to beat that this year.

Maggie Holton set out a little more than a year ago with a dream of an all-inclusive playground for her fellow Huntington Ronald McDonald house residents

Her approach led to her being awarded in April the 2016 Herald-Dispatch Citizen of the Year award.

The custom-built, handicap-accessible playground was constructed by Rubber Designs in February and opened in March. It features nautical paintings by advanced-placement art students at Cabell Midland High School, as well as sea-blue rubber flooring.

Nicholas Bernatowicz's team was designing a game for a deaf player. He said the hardest part was probably writing papers with all the letters of the alphabet to be used in the game.

Sophie Zinn said it took "probably a minute" to come up with the idea for their ping pong game but perfecting the design was harder. Ryelyn Manko, her partner, said her favorite thing about the challenge was helping people.

Coen Thomas Bryson McNew's game was for people with no use of their hands.

"We had a great idea but once we had our disability, we had to redo the whole thing," Bryson said. They came up with a stick that can be moved in a hole in the box. Coen is inside.

"There's little papers down there," Bryson said. "And the person under there grabs and tells you how many tickets you got."

The tickets are similar to those won at arcades.

Different challenges can be taken on each year. For example, students may design cardboard homes that cope with different climate challenges, like frequent rain. Kingwood students work on the project one day each week.

Older couple mourns loss of friends and connections

DEAR ABBY: I am 74. and my wife is 71. We are lonely. All of our friends have died, and we have no relatives in this state. We both have health issues that keep us mostly housebound. That leaves out volunteering and sports, and the high cost of gas is a factor.

We live in our own home and want to continue living here. Our home is in a development consisting of busy families involved in their own lives, or too young to bother with a couple of older people. We tried church, only to find that everyone there is as involved in their own lives as our neighbors are.

How can we have friends like we used to have, and not shallow acquaintances? -FRIGHTENED OF THE FUTURE IN PA.

DEAR FRIGHT-ENED: If there are senior citizen centers in vour community, I recommend you contact them. It's also it's important to remember that the kind of friendships you and your wife used to have take time to develop. You say most of your neighbors are busy with their children. Perhaps vou could reach out and offer to baby-sit for some of them in your home.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently in the bakery section of our neighborhood grocery store. A woman came rushing in carrying a cake that had been at least threefourths eaten and made a scene, saying the cake was terrible and demanding that she be given a new one. To stop the scene, the store manager gave her a new one, even though she had managed to eat most of the "terrible" cake.

The next night, my husband and I went to dinner at a nice steak house. The couple sitting next to us ate almost their entire dinner before complaining to the manager that the steaks were awful and demanding their meals for free.

Has this become acceptable? — OFFEND-ED IN KANSAS

DEAR OFFENDED: It appears that way. The most effective way to demonstrate that an item of food is inedible is to not eat it.

Beginning of the end for 'The Middle'

BY RICK BENTLEY

Tribune News Service (TNS)

LOS ANGELES — "The Middle" has reached the end. The ninth season of the ABC comedy about a middle class family living in the Middle America city of Orson, Ind., will be the last. Coming to such a decision was not easy for the cast and executive producers, but they all finally agreed the time was right to stop production.

Executive producer Eileen Heisler explained, "We'd all talked together as creators and cast, and it was kind of feeling the moment when, for us, we felt like it was time and wanting to leave when people, hopefully, still want more of it rather than staying so long that people say, 'Why did they stay here so long?'

Discussions about a finale season of the series starring Patricia Heaton, Neil Flynn, Charlie McDermott, Eden Sher and Atticus Shaffer started a year ago. Everyone agreed that it would be nice to have a season where they could wrap up all of the storylines for each member of the Heck family. The plan is to make sure all of the characters get a big episode and bring back some familiar faces — such as Reverend Tim Tom - for guest appearances.

The one thing that won't change is that the show will still focus on the love and support the family show for each other while facing the daily challenges of life. The legacy of "The Middle" has been that while it was designed to be a glimpse into the world of Middle America, the focus on family had an appeal from coast to coast. In many ways, "The Middle" is a TV comedy that exists somewhere between the generally optimistic "Everybody Loves Raymond" and the pessimistic views of "Roseanne."

"The Middle" is the second successful family comedy for Heaton after a long run on "Raymond." That gave her a direct perspective on what it is about a TV show that makes it work and why many fail so quickly. "I think the great shows are great because it comes from real experience. And I can tell you that some of the most outrageous episodes actually happened to the writers. And that's true on 'The Middle' and on 'Raymond," Heaton said. "We've been going through all these things together, all of us. And that's what gives it authenticity. And then you just have super talented people.

"But I think authenticity would be the key."

Unlike other family comedies, "The Middle" never went for big stunt episodes like a trip to an exotic location (unless you consider Indianapolis an exotic location) or being involved with some type of celebrity function. For the Hecks, one of the biggest moments in their lives was getting to drive a float in the local parade.

As the final season begins to roll out, there are a few tiny doubts about whether it was the right decision. Shaffer, who plays the quirky Brick, has always thought there was more comedy left in the series.

"I've always been the one that has said, 'Oh, no. I think we can keep going. I think there's more stories to be told' and whatever. So I absolutely respect the decision that was made, but there is a part of me that's, like, 'Oh, come on, we can do one more," "Shaffer said. "It's specifically for the reason that no matter what slant the country tends to go politically, our show is about family values and morals and us being together as a family and how do you navigate the craziness of life as a family and kind of not 'trading a virtue for a vice' type of thing. That's something that I've always felt is an important aspect of the show. And I know that that's something that people will miss."

Vatican newspaper OK with 'The Young Pope'

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican newspaper broke a yearlong silence and weighed in on director Paolo Sorrentino's "The Young Pope," giving the television series generally positive reviews despite what it called the "frivolous," "caustic" and "grotesque" way it painted the Vatican.

L'Osservatore Romano dedicated a two-page spread in today's edition to the 10-episode series, which began airing in Italy in October 2016 and in North America this year.

The main essay was penned by Juan Manuel de Prada, a Spanish intellectual who explored the contradictions — in Sorrentino, in the character of Pope Pius XIII, played by Jude Law, and in the Vatican hierarchy presented by the series.

"The Young Pope" opens with the improbable election of Lenny Belardo as history's first American pope. Despite his youth, Belardo charts a deeply conservative, controversial and at times vicious papacy, still haunted by the trauma of being abandoned by his parents and raised by a nun. The series features Diane Keaton as the nun, Sister Mary, who is convinced

Lenny is a saint, and Silvio

secretary of state who spars with him. Orlando's

Cardinal Voiello is a perfect amalgam and caricature of real-life past Vatican secretaries of state. In his review, de Prada found that inside Sorrentino's anti-clerical rants there was also a "docile admiration for the church."

The newspaper's silence during the Italian run was notable, since other Catholic media were almost unanimous in their criticism. L'Osservatore's editor-in-chief, Gian Maria Vian, said he specifically chose not to enter into the Catholic media debate while the show was airing. "They wanted us to either bless it or excommunicate it, and I didn't want to play that game," Vian said in a telephone interview Saturday. "But we intervened now because it's an important television series, an important cultural phenomenon."

Paying players won't stop all the corruption

You can get on WVU's athletic website right now and purchase a Geno Smith football jersey for $99.99 or game-used shorts from No. 5 from the 2011-'12 men's basketball season (Kevin Jones) for

And Jones' and Smith's bank accounts will not prosper a single penny from the sale.

In a nutshell, that is the argument made for paying today's college athletes — they are refused the right by NCAA rules to benefit from their talents and own likeness, while the schools make millions from season-ticket sales, TV deals and by selling jerseys with the players' numbers on them.

And if you listen to the critics, you'll be made to believe that if college athletes were permitted to earn their fair-market value, then there would be less corruption and less of a dirty underbelly to the game, much of which is under an FBI investigation that already cost Louisville men's hoops coach Rick Piti-no his job.

Please, don't believe all of

Don't believe that just because a college athlete is suddenly allowed to appear in TV commercials and earn a percentage from sales of his jersey that he's not going to also accept some behind-closed-doors payment to sign with a seedy agent

Don't think for a second that a coach on the hot seat won't still look to break rules and offer some cash to a recruit for his signature on a letter-of-intent. Look, I'm not going to defend the NCAA on its out-of-date views toward amateurism.

That, I believe, most of us can agree on.

"It's like a guy told me one time, he said, 'In most cases, you take a poor kid and buy him a new washer and dryer and a couch and some chairs and maybe a decent bed to sleep on and you're considered a hero and they put you in a parade. If we do it, we're criminals,' "WVU men's basketball coach Bob Huggins said. "There is some truth to that, but not much. At the end of the day, everybody has to answer to themselves."

The part I don't understand is, how do all of these charges of corruption, bribery and fraud that you'll find in the FBI's probe go away by simply changing some NCAA rules?

How does all of it go away by legally paying college athletes their fair-market value and not just the amount of a scholarship?

None of it goes away. Why? Because by focusing solely on the athlete in this scenario, you're missing the dozens of other factors behind the corruption.

Throwing money at college athletes may slow the Titanic down, but you're still heading for the iceberg.

"I guess if you think you can get away with it, you probably do it," Huggins said. "I would think that all of those people probably didn't think they were going to get caught."

If you listen to ESPN's Jay Bilas, you'll be led to believe the FBI's investigation will change little and it won't be long before corrupt coaches are back in business.

Maybe so, but just don't link that to a reason to start paying college athletes.

There are several good reasons to do just that, but this isn't one of them.

Visitor facilities not a concern, Holgs says

WVU coach focused on his Mountaineers' play

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

BY SEAN MANNING

The Dominion Post

WVU head football coach Dana Holgorsen had a couple of minor complaint about the accommodations his team was given at the stadium while playing at Kansas last week.

"It didn't smell very well," he joked. "It was hot in there, too. It stunk; it was bad."

The talk of standards given to visiting teams reached a tipping point last week, after Michigan traveled to Purdue to take on the Boilermakers.

Michigan head coach Jim Harbaugh didn't shy away from criticizing the fellow Big Ten school when it put his team in jeopardy.

After the Wolverines beat Purdue, 28-10, on the road, Harbaugh had some unsportsmanlike; gamesmanship should cease at the line of health and safety of the players," Harbaugh said. "It seems to be a conscious effort to get an advantage."

Michigan's starters had to sit on the team bus in the air conditioning because the locker room did not Harbaugh also took issue with quarterback Wilton Speight having to leave the stadium to get X-rays done at a local medical facility rather than having that equipment handy.

Purdue responded to Harbaugh's comments in a statement, saying, "To help teams prepare in advance, our visiting team manual highlights in bold type, 'There is no air conditioning choice words about in the locker room,' with accompanving Purdue Athletics staff contact information about how to request preferred temporary accommodations. We did not receive any such request."

The statement also said that Purdue does have the proper equipment within its athletic facilities, but there is "more sophisticated" equipment two blocks away, a similar arrangement to what many other schools offer. Both Harbaugh and Ohio State head coach Urban Meyer have been vocal about Purdue's facilities — or lack thereof — and would like a conference-mandated reform to make sure accommodations don't risk the well-being of the players and coaches of the visiting teams.

Holgorsen doesn't believe that other schools in the Big 12 have issues as bad as Harbaugh claims Purdue has. especially where the Mountaineers are headed next.

WVU men's basketball coach Bob Huggins questions a call in a game against TCU last season.

Huggs on cheating: 'I don't do it'

Corruption allegations in sport 'a shame'

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

The Dominion Post

With a clear conscience and a strong voice, one of the most respected coaches in college basketball did not shy away from the controversies threatening to pick away at the foundation of today's game.

"I don't do it," WVU men's basketball coach Bob Huggins said, referring to an FBI investigation that rocked college hoops, centering on charges of corruption, bribery and fraud.

"If all this stuff is true, what a shame. It's just like anything else. If there is money involved, it gets infiltrated. That's any walk of life."

The investigation is eyeopening, mostly because the charges brought against four assistant coaches from Arizona, Auburn, Oklahoma State and USC on Sept. 26, as well as potential offenses that could be charged against coaches at Louisville and Miami are just the tip of the iceberg.

Could one of our guys do something that I don't know about? Yes, but I would find out.

Bob Huggins WVU men's basketball coach

Federal agents also brought charges against officials at Adidas for funneling money to potential basketball recruits and subpoenaed Nike's youth basketball division, in what may eventually lead to similar charges. Nike and Adidas are the two largest suppliers of uniforms and apparel to colleges in the United States. WVU's athletic teams are outfitted by Nike.

And while numerous head coaches opened up press conferences to mark the opening of practice last week with a host of "no comment," Huggins instead opened the door for a peek inside his program.

"Could one of our guys do something that I don't know about? Yes, but I would find out," said Huggins, who has notched 819 victories in 35 years as a head coach. "I may not know right away, but I would find out.

"I think what our charge is, we make sure that our guys understand what we're going to do. Some things shouldn't happen, but if they happen, there will be severe consequences. My guys know that."

The idea of paying a recruit for his services is not new, but one that Huggins said he steers away from for one simple reason:

"I don't know that I have a moral issue with it, but I couldn't coach them," Huggins said. "I could never go into practice and have someone hold something over my head. That's the thing that scares me about doing the wrong thing.

4740, from Jan. 17, 2016.

"To put up a team score better than anything we shot last year should give this team a lot of confidence — it is a great sign of what we're capable of throughout this season," WVU coach Jon Hammond said.

"There is still room for improvement in all areas, but this is a great confidence builder, especially in the first home match."

WVU swept the discipline victories, shooting an NCAA record 2390 air rifle and 2341 smallbore.

The Mountaineers' air rifle total bests the team's previous national record of 2388, shot on Jan. 17, 2016.

WVU sophomore Milica Babic earned the individual victories, matching her career-high smallbore score of 589 (192 kneeling, 199 prone, 198 standing) and shooting a season-best 598 (100-100-100-99-100-99) air rifle.

Junior Ginny Thrasher matched Babic's winning air rifle total of 598 (99-100-99-100-100-100).

Redshirt-freshman David Koenders and sophomore Morgan Phillips tied for third place, with 597 scores.

Senior Elizabeth Gratz shot a season-best 595, finishing fifth, and junior Will Anti shot a careerbest 594, placing sixth.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio — The University High boys' soccer team defeated Morgantown High, 1-0, on Saturday afternoon, in the Ohio Valley Athletic Conference (OVAC) championship game.

Liam Theeke hammered a finish fed by a cross from Pierce Spain to record the game's goal.

MHS's game plan of playing a defensive line stymied the Hawks' high-scoring offense for much of the contest.

WHEELING — Wheeling Park (14-1-2) scored two goals in the first two minutes and held on to heat University High (11-1-3) in the OVAC 5A championship game, on Saturday, at Wheeling Island Stadium.

Soon after the kickoff, a

Hawks defensive breakdown led to Wheeling Park's Morgan Glass tapping in a shot from less than three yards out.

Less than a minute later, a scramble in front of the Hawks' goal led to the ball rolling into net from 18 yards. UHS regrouped from there and held off the dangerous Patriots attack to get to halftime down, 2-0.

The second half was a different story, with University dominating for long stretches and pushing the attack, but the Park defense held firm and time ran out on the two-time defending champion Hawks.

"Sometimes the ball just doesn't bounce your way,' co-coach Graham UHS Peace said. "But all credit to Wheeling Park — they are deserving champions. I'm really proud of how our ladies responded to the bizarre start, and they battled to the very end, but it's incredibly difficult to chase a game against a team as talented and well-coached as Park soccer team. We'll regroup from this; and we're really looking forward to the state tournament." Next up, UHS hosts Fair-Redshirt senior Amy Cashin earned a 29th-place finish (7:17.16).

"This was a huge test for our program," WVU coach Sean Cleary said. "We had almost the entire group on the line and emerged with what I would consider a good performance.

"While we won't leave this course ecstatic, we will leave with the understanding that we ran well but must get better."

A pair of freshmen were the third and fourth Mountaineers to reach the finish line.

Sarah Wills placed 63rd (17:38.17), while Hayley Jackson, making her WVU debut, came in 80th (17:46.45).

Redshirt sophomore Candace Jones (17:47.87) placed 84th.

sophomore Redshirt Olivia Hill (18:11.36) and freshman Bree Warren (18:31.16) also raced for the Mountaineers.

The Blue team defeated the Gold, 164-143, for the first time in three years in WVU's 12-race, mixed intrasquad Gold-Blue meet, on Saturday, at the Natatorium.

"I thought the energy was great," WVU coach Vic Riggs said. "The teams swam well for their first meet. We definitely have some areas we need to work on, but it's early in the season and I thought it was a great start for the teams."

Junior Morgan Carr and sophomore Julia Nilton led the Blue team with three wins apiece, including two individual victories.

Redshirt junior Tristen Di Sibio, junior Merwane El Merini and sophomore Julia Miranda each added two more wins for the victors.

Senior Amelie Currat and sophomore Luke Hene also helped the Blue team's cause with individual wins.

The Gold squad was led by redshirt senior Nate Carr, who secured three total wins, two in individual races.

season Friday and Saturday, hosting the West Virginia State Games, at the Natatorium.

The competition features collegiate swimming and diving programs from across the state.

Diving begins at 4 p.m. Friday, while swimming starts at 6 p.m. Saturday's competition begins at 10 a.m.

WVU hosts its first ranked opponent of the season at noon today, as No. 20 Pacific (7-2-0) invades Dick Dlesk Soccer Stadium.

"This is the first of many down the final stretch as we hit October," WVU coach Marlon LeBlanc said. "Pacific is a very good team, well-coached, wellorganized."

Today's contest marks the first meeting between the schools. The Mountaineers (6-2-2) are coming off a 7-0 loss at Pitt, on Tuesday, that capped a stretch of five games in 14 days. Pacific, which won its first six matches, will try to rebound from a 2-0 loss at Oregon State, on Sept. 22.

Today is Monongalia County School Day. Elementary and middle school students from schools in the county will be honored at halftime. The first 250 fans receive free WVU texting gloves.

Huggins noted his assistant staff included two coaches — Larry Harrison and Ron Everhart — who were at one time head coaches in college basketball. A third assistant, Erik Martin, played for Huggins, at Cincinnati, and has been an assistant under Huggins for 11 years.

assistants Experienced did not stop coaches at Louisville from allegedly conspiring with officials from Adidas to funnel $100,000 to a potential recruit, believed to be Brian Bowen, a freshman guard with the Cardinals this season. Bowen was suspended indefinitely from the program.

Chuck Person was a former NBA Rookie of the Year, and a longtime assistant with the Los Angeles Lakers and the Auburn Tigers.

He was charged with bribery and fraud, accused of accepting nearly $92,000 from a financial adviser for steering Auburn players to the adviser in order to be represented professionally by the agent.

Huggins said it didn't feel any different now being a coach when all eyes seem to be on college hoops coaches these days, but also doubted the investigation will eventually reach as many programs as projected.

"All you can control is what you control," Huggins said. "I have control here of our guys and our team. Somebody said [the FBI] got calls from 100 coaches. I doubt that.

"Then the coaches said, 'I hope they don't knock on my door.' They asked the guy, and he said 80 percent of the coaches cheat. Then he said it was more like 40 percent."

Whatever the percentage, Huggins said the majority of the investigations center on the top recruits in the country — "We don't have those top whatever guys. You guys know that," Huggins said — and he felt comfortable with WVU's system of finding players who are willing to put in the work.

"We go get guys that we think will be successful in what we do." Huggins said. "For the most part, they have.

"I think our [coaches] are more in line with, 'Let's go work and let's go watch a lot of games and see who fits in.'

'I think he (Harbaugh) nailed it," Holgorsen said. "Me complaining about it, which I am not, that is just part of the deal. I would never complain about that, it's not my place. It is an administrative deal. Administration, Big 12 offices, Big Ten offices, I am sure they are going to do something about it.

"I have other things to worry about. That is what a visitor's locker should be, shouldn't it? Treat the visitor like crap, make it hard on them. No air conditioning, no stalls on the toilets; that makes me chuckle."

Joking aside, coaches the stature of Harbaugh and Meyer could get things in motion and schools may be required to improve visiting facilities.

Hamilton scores 3 TDs in PSU romp

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — DaeSean Hamilton caught nine passes for 122 yards and three touchdowns and became Penn State's career receptions leader in the No. 4 Nittany Lions' 45-14 victory over Indiana on Saturday.

Hamilton teamed with quarterback Trace McSorley on the first two scoring passes and caught the third from running back Saquon Barkley to cap the scoring in the fourth quarter. Hamilton hauled in his 180th career catch midway through the fourth quarter to break the record set by Deon Butler, in 2008.

Barkley returned the opening kickoff 98 vards for a touchdown and finished with 221 yards to pad his Heisman Trophy resume. Penn State (5-0, 2-0 Big Ten) turned two first-quarter turnovers into touchdowns to spark the rout. McSorlev added a rushing touchdown, Nick Scott scored on a fumble return, and Tyler Davis added a pair of field goals for Penn State.

The Hoosiers (2-2, 0-2) turned the ball over on their second play of the game when Morgan Ellison coughed it up to linebacker Jason Cabinda after an 18-yard gain. McSorley capped an ensuing six-play, 39-yard drive with a 1-yard touchdown run.

Indiana fumbled it away again when Irvin Charles ripped the ball out of punt returner J-Shun Harris' hands. Scott scooped it up and returned it 13 yards to put Penn State up 21-0 less than 10 minutes in.

Tennessee (3-2, 0-2) was shut out for the first time since a 31-0 loss to Florida, in 1994.

The Bulldogs got more good news in the fourth quarter, when quarterback Jacob Eason made his first appearance since spraining his left knee in the season opener. Fromm was 7 of 15 for 84 yards and also rushed for 20 yards before giving way to Eason with the game well in hand.

MADISON, Wis. Jonathan Taylor had two touchdowns runs to help the offense overcome a sluggish start and Wisconsin held off Northwestern.

Alex Hornibrook threw for 197 yards and a touchdown, settling down after two interceptions in the first half. Garrett Dooley had four of Wisconsin's 10 sacks.

Northwestern's last drive was thwarted when Clayton Thorson couldn't find a receiver out of his own end zone and was sacked by D'Cota Dixon for a safety.

Thorson was having a good quarter until then, throwing two touchdown passes in less than two minutes. The second, to Garrett Dickerson, with 2:53 left, got the Wildcats within a touchdown.

But Wisconsin (4-0, 1-0 Big Ten) stood up the Wildcats (2-2, 0-1) again late to seal the win in each team's conference opener.

The Bulls (5-0, 2-0 American) overcame some rare struggles on defense and remained perfect under firstyear coach Charlie Strong by scoring on 10 of the 12 possessions with the starting offense. USF outscored the Pirates (1-4, 1-1) 30-7 in the second half.

(21) Florida 38 Vanderbilt 24

GAINESVILLE, Fla. -Lamical Perine scored three touchdowns, Malik Davis added two and Florida beat Vanderbilt despite losing quarterback Luke Del Rio for the season with a broken left collarbone.

Coach Jim McElwain said Del Rio will have season-ending surgery Monday. It's the second straight year Del Rio failed to make it through the season uninjured.

Perine bookended two 1-yard plunges around a 13-yard scamper to help the Gators (3-1, 3-0) beat the Commodores (3-2, 0-2) for the 26th time in the last 27 meetings.

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Jesse Ertz ran for two touchdowns and Kansas State withstood a secondhalf rally to beat Baylor.

Ertz had 12 carries for 95 yards, including a 15-yard run in the third quarter to extend the Kansas State lead to 27-13.

winning The Wildcats tipped the balance of their offense in the second half with just five pass attempts compared to 23 rushes.

For the game, Kansas State (3-1,1-0 Big 12) ran the ball 43 times for 225 yards and two touchdowns.

Pitt 42, Rice 10

PITTSBURGH — Max Browne returned at starting quarterback and threw four touchdown passes in Pittsburgh's rout.

Pitt's offense was rolling from the start, scoring on its first three possessions. Chawntez Moss and Jester Weah hauled in touchdown passes of 48 and 55 yards and Qadree Ollison added a 10-yard touchdown run.

Browne, a redshirt senior transfer from Southern Cal, came out of training camp as Pittsburgh's starter, but lost the job to redshirt sophomore Ben DiNucci after three games. DiNucci started against Georgia Tech a week ago, but couldn't stop the slide as Pitt (2-3) lost its third game in a row.

Fairmont State 34 UVa-Wise 6

FAIRMONT — The Falcons' defense forced five turnovers and held UVa-Wise out of the end zone in rolling to a Mountain East Conference (MEC) victory.

The FSU (4-0, 4-0 MEC) defense totaled four interceptions for 110 return yards. Quincy Redmon returned a fumble recovery 96 yards for a score — giving the Falcons 206 total return yards in the victory.

The UVa-Wise (3-2, 3-2) offense was limited to 193 yards, and quarterback Jarome Jackson was pressured into five sacks.

FSU's JuJuan Young-Battle completed 7 of 16 passes for 100 yards and two touchdowns. FSU plays again at noon Saturday, at Notre Dame College.

Dutch oven hard to beat for great roast

DEER ARCHERY SEASON opened Saturday and for those of you who harvested a deer, you may want to consider using a dutch oven to prepare a great roast. These cast iron cookers have been around a long time and do a wonderful job.

When the pioneers were migrating west, the dutch oven, cast iron skillet and coffee pot were their main cooking utensils. As time passed, cooking in a dutch oven almost became a lost art. Now, almost everyone has some sort of grill, but the use of dutch ovens is making a comeback.

Before purchasing a dutch oven, you need to think about how many people you'll be cooking for and if you're going to have to carry it over a long distance, such as on a hiking and camping trip.

These ovens come in two different metals: Cast iron and aluminum. Obviously, the aluminum is the lighter. However, aluminum can develop hot spots and cook unevenly. Cast iron is far and away the better choice.

Dutch ovens come in many sizes and shapes, but most are round. A 10-inch pot is sufficient for cooking for two people. A 12-inch pot will suffice for four or five and a larger group will require up to a 16-inch pot.

Once you've decided on the size pot you need, you'll have to buy one at either a hardware store or sporting goods store, or maybe find one at a yard sale. Whether you buy a new one or a used one, the first thing you have to do is "season" it just like a cast iron skil-

If you purchase a new one, it will probably be coated with a thin laver of wax to prevent rust. Place the new oven up side down with the lid on top of the bottom in a covered grill or your regular oven at about 400 degrees.

Heat it for about two hours or until it quits smoking; remove it and let it cool. You may have to use a stiff brush and some warm, soapy water to complete the job. If you have to use water, be sure to put the oven back in the heat for about a half hour to completely dry it.

While the pot is still warm, coat the inside and outside of it and the lid with a thin layer of a good grade of olive or vegetable oil. Peanut oil is also a good choice. Put the pot and lid back in the oven upside down at about 450 degrees and bake for 30 or 45 minutes or until they quit smoking. The oil should turn almost black and create a shiny and virtually noscrub surface. After the pot cools, if it's sticky, bake for another half hour. Some people will apply the oil twice to ensure a good "seasoning."

The first thing you cook in your oven should be a roast, chicken or potatoes. After you have used it a few times, you can begin to cook tomatoes and other things with a high acid content that tends to break down the protective covering. The same thing applies to things like cobblers that have a high sugar content. One of the unique characteristics of the dutch oven is that you can bake, stew, broil or fry with it. You can hang it over an open fire, place it on charcoal briquettes or bury it in a fire pit. Using charcoal briquettes is probably easiest. Here are some good general rules-of-thumb as to takes to generate a given amount of heat. Two times the diameter of the pot is the number of briquettes you'll need to heat it to 325 degrees. Each additional charcoal will add about 10 to 15 degrees. It's much easier to control the temperature with charcoal than it is with an open fire.

If you want to bake in your oven, place the charcoals in rings with twice as many on the lid as underneath. Stewing or simmering requires the coals to be evenly split in rings, top and bottom. Broiling is done by placing the coals in a checkerboard pattern in a 2:1 ratio top over bottom. To fry, place all of the coals underneath the pot.

Cooking in a dutch oven is not hard, but it will take a little practice and patience. If you see steam escaping from around the lid, it is too hot. Another helpful hint is to rotate your pot every 15 minutes. Lift the lid and rotate the oven 90 degrees. This keeps the pot from developing hot spots that lead to uneven cooking.

Cleaning a dutch oven after cooking is the subject of debates among users of these fine utensils. Some say that you can use a small amount of detergent and others say to never use any. If you've been cooking something that is very greasy, a few drops of detergent won't harm a well-seasoned pot.

If you are lucky enough to find an oven at an auction or yard sale, you'll more than likely have to give it a good cleaning before you season it. Many of these have not been properly cared for in a long time. One of the best ways to clean the "gunk" out of one is to use a can or two of Coke. Pour it in the pot and rub some all over the outside and the lid. You'll be amazed at how it cleans and loosens everything.

Rinse the oven out and dry it over heat. Then you're ready to season it just like a new one.

Researcher receives grant

Will investigate treatments for harmful inflammation in body

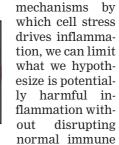

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Inflammation is overwhelmingly beneficial, helping to fight illnesses caused by bacteria and viruses. However, most neurological diseases involve inflammation in the brain, which is thought to contribute to or exacerbate diseases.

A WVU researcher received $1.6 million to conduct research on how harmful inflammation can be targeted without disrupting normal immune function.

Gordon Meares was selected by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) to receive the funding over the next five years.

"Our approach is to examine how cell stress and cell damage drive inflammation as these are prominent features of neurologhave found that by targeting the > Meares is a strong proponent of collaboration as a key to success. His research uses tools and techniques across the university and is expanding into the area of stroke, joining efforts facilitated by WVU Stroke Center of Biomedical Research Excellence.

Student volunteers with Nursery School

Submitted to The Dominion Post

A student from the Statler College of Engineering and Mineral Resources has been introducing children to basic engineering principles through fun, hands-on activities while volunteering at the Nursery School at WVU.

Joshua Bintrim, an industrial engineering major from Waynesburg, Pa., began visiting the Nursery School in August as part of his capstone course, which requires him to complete two hours of volunteering per week.

While it was unconventional, Bintrim knew that volunteering at the school would allow him to spread awareness about engineering while also gaining some much-needed hands-on experience with children.

"My wife and I are expecting our first child in March," Bintrim said. "I thought volunteering at the school would be a great way to share some of the knowledge I've learned about engineering while also gaining some wisdom on the ways of small children in the process."

Bintrim visits the school every Friday and is tasked with teaching 3- and 4-year-olds how to build basic structures. He uses foam blocks, Legos and to think about how small pieces can fit together to build something much larger.

'While what can be built with these blocks is limited, the children's imaginations fill in the gaps," Bintrim said. "We have built pirate ships, space ships, motorcycles, dinosaurs, carriages and a few other crazy things. They really enjoy adding their own little flare to what we are building.'

Bintrim lets the students do the majority of the work and allows them to decide things like how many walls their structure should have or if they should install roofs and flooring.

Nursery School Director

trim's visits have become a highlight of the children's week and hopes that more engineering students will follow is his footsteps.

"The children ask each day, 'Is it a Josh day?' " Warash said. "Having Joshua at the nursery school is wonderful. He is a great role model in the early childhood field of mostly female teachers. Our students are lucky to experience the dynamics of creating buildings and structures as well as the rich interactions with Joshua."

Bintrim and Warash agree that it's essential to expose children to science, technology, engineering and math at a voung age.

Submitted to The Dominion Post

As the second-oldest state in the nation, West Virginia is in dire need for professionals who can work with its aging population.

To meet this need, the School of Social Work at WVU launched a new undergraduate gerontology minor geared toward understanding the biological, social and spiritual aspects associated with the aging process.

"The biggest thing the minor will do for students is set them apart from other applicants in their job search, making them more marketable and helping them receive higher consideration for jobs," said Kristina Hash, professor and director of the gerontology certificate program and minor.

Online options and a General Education Foundation course that can count toward a student's major or another minor are among the several courses in the diverse program.

"Usually people come to gerontology from a personal place," Hash said. "Students might take a course or complete an entire minor just to learn about their aging loved ones. We have something for everyone, regardless of career goal or major.'

As the baby boomer generation comes to age in the U.S., it brings with it the "Floridization" phenomenon. By 2020, the population distribution of the U.S. will be comparable to that of the state of Florida.

Because of the shifting population, there is a shortage of trained professionals working with older adults. The shortage includes not only physicians and nurses, but the entire helping health profession.

"It's a crisis at both the national and state levels, and it's only going to get worse," Hash said. "That's where the jobs are going to be."

This cohort of older adults is different than previous generations because they are healthier and seek more opportunities for recreation and learning. As a result, nursing homes and senior centers are beginning to change by adding new features like coffee bars and Wi-Fi to meet the evolving needs of the cohort. This is opening more employment opportunities than ever before in new markets, such as insurance, marketing and tourism.

"This particular cohort are people who march for equal rights, who stand up for their beliefs, who question — they are not going to be passive. The baby boomers are pushing the envelope," Hash said. "In response, many other fields are also changing to prepare for the aging population, leaving a lot of entry points into the sensation that is aging adults. It's not just social workers and nurses and physicians and pharmacists — it's economists, marketers, interior designers and urban planners, too."

Kelly Doyle, WVU Libraries' Wikipedian in Residence for Gen-

Foundation gives WVU $52K grant

Funds will aid program expansion in 3 schools

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The Wikimedia Foundation awarded WVU Libraries a $52,000 grant to enable Kelly Doyle, the Libraries' Wikipedian in Residence (WIR) for Gender Equity, to continue her efforts at WVU and expand the thriving program to three other universities.

"We are thrilled that the Wikimedia Foundation recognizes WVU Libraries' contribution to Wikipedia and has chosen to support our continued work of addressing Wikipedia's gender gap," said Karen Diaz, interim dean of WVU Libraries. "We are very excited to continue this work and lead the academic library community in Wikipedia initiatives."

Wikipedia has a well-documented gender gap — nearly 90 percent of the site's volunteer editors are male - that has resulted in content about men and male-related topics greatly outweighing materials about women and female-related topics. WVU Libraries took the lead in 2015 with the hiring of Doyle as the first WIR for Gender Equity. At its core, a WIR's role is raising awareness, creating partnerships and organizing communities.

Over the past two years, Doyle recruited 350 students to create more than 50 new articles on Wikipedia related to women from West Virginia and edit and improve another 100 existing articles.

The Wikimedia grant, which runs through the 2018 calendar year, will enable Doyle to work with three partnering universities — American University Libraries, Ohio State University Libraries and University of Pittsburgh Libraries — to help them replicate this program on their campuses. An initial step will be creating training materials based on the experience and information gained at WVU.

"By collaborating with other libraries and building programming that links to their efforts around information literacy, we are excited about building ongoing capacity for libraries to continue the work Kelly has begun and to serve as institutional hosts for this work moving forward," Diaz said.

YOUTH SOCCER

FC33 opens with success

FC33 opened its fall tournament season with a successful run at the Erie (Pa.) Elite Challenge. The tourney boasted a field of travel soccer clubs from Pennsylvania, Unio, Indiana, New York, Kentucky, West Virginia and Canada. This was the first tournament for the newly minted travel club, which sent five teams. Three finished in second place: The under-14 girls (top), U12 girls (middle) and U12 boys (bottom). The U10 boys placed third; the U10 girls didn't place. FC33 is the combination of the travel teams from Barbour County Youth Soccer, Mid-State Soccer, and Seneca Soccer, which formed this summer. It also has players who reside in Monongalia, Harrison and Lewis counties. Info: FC33.org.

Steelers-Ravens rivalry one of NFL's craziest

PRO FOOTBALL

Associated Press

SPORTS

As early as it might be in the NFL schedule, several division games could be considered relatively critical in Week 4.

They include the best rivalry in the league, the Pittsburgh Steelers against the Baltimore Ravens.

"This game is crazy," Pittsburgh's Ben Roethlisberger notes. "It's a special game. I'm still here and (linebacker Terrell) Suggs is still over there. We've got a lot of respect for each other in this rivalry. C.J. Mosley, Jimmy Smith, (Brandon) Carr, and (Eric) Weddle now."

Among other things, it's for first place in the division. Maybe that doesn't sound significant at this point of the season, but with both teams 2-1, and Cincinnati and Cleveland both winless, the victor at Baltimore takes quick control in the AFC North.

Oakland (2-1) at Denver (2-1)

Another terrific rivalry. With the Chiefs off to such a brilliant start, and both of these teams coming off stinkers, the loser here could be doing lots of chasing in the AFC West.

The juiciest matchup is the Raiders' dynamic offense against a Denver D that is at a Rocky Mountain high at home.

Detroit (2-1) at Minnesota (2-1)

Detroit's opportunistic defense, which leads the NFL with a plus-6 turnover margin, has seven interceptions. Minnesota has not thrown any.

Perhaps the spotlight should be on the kickers. The Lions' Matt Prater made field goals of 55 and 57 yards last week, becoming second only to Sebastian Janikowski in NFL history with 10 55-plus makes.

Tennessee (2-1) at Houston (1-2)

One reason Houston controlled the AFC South in recent seasons is winning five of the last six with Tennessee. Its defense must slow the ground-eating tandem of DeMarco Murray, who had a 75-yard touchdown last week, and Derrick Henry.

Carolina (2-1)

at New England (2-1) No one feels sympathy for the Patriots, but Tom Brady well knows the previous time they faced the Panthers, a controversial noncall on star linebacker Luke Kuechly preserved a Carolina victory.

"Might have got away with one there," Kuechly acknowledged this week. "I'm not even gonna act like I didn't. I might have got away with one."

Washington (2-1) at Kansas City (3-0), Monday night

The Redskins' only win in nine meetings was 34 years ago. Washington has been outscored 191-69 in six games since.

Although both defenses looked strong recently, this could be an offensive showcase. Each team has a dynamic back: The Redskins' Chris Thompson (13.0 yards per touch) and Chiefs' Kareem Hunt (9.6) are tops at the position. K.C. leads the NFL in rushing.

Buffalo (2-1) at Atlanta (3-0)

Although they are 3-0, the defending NFC champs have had two way-too-tight escapes on the road to go with a romp past Green Bay at home. If Matt Ryan repeats his three-interception performance at Detroit, the new Mercedes-Benz Stadium might not be so comfortable for Atlanta.

Buffalo's defense has been staunch under new coach Sean McDermott, allowing two touchdowns to match a franchise low through three games.

Los Angeles Rams (2-1) at Dallas (2-1)

Surprisingly, a marquee matchup because the Rams found an offense. QB Jared Goff, the top overall draft choice in 2016, is showing maturity and accuracy.

He had a career-best 145.8 passer rating against the 49ers with 292 yards and three TDs.

New Orleans (1-2) vs. Miami (1-1) at London

The Dolphins slept through their meeting in the Meadowlands with the Jets, and now they head to Wembley, where they lost the very first regular-season NFL match staged there. It's already been a difficult season for them, from losing their starting quarterback, to Hurricane Irma to a seemingly end-

Indianapolis (1-2) at Seattle (1-2)

Looks as if struggling Seattle found its running back in rookie Chris Carson. a seventh-rounder who has 37 carries; no other Seahawks RB has more than eight. But a franchise that prides itself on a powerhouse running game has not scored a TD on the ground.

Jacksonville (2-1) at New York Jets (1-2)

If the Jags are in the midst of a turnaround, they must win this game.

Yes, the Jets are coming off a strong knockout of Miami, but who really believes they are going anywhere after trashing the roster? But Jacksonville's beat-down of Baltimore the Jaguars did the same at Houston in their opener - and the emergence of CB Jalen Ramsey and rookie RB Leonard Fournette indicate new/old team boss Tom Coughlin is making progress.

New York Giants (0-3) at Tampa Bay (1-1)

Desperate times for the Giants, who at this point likely were contemplating the opposite record than what they have.

But with a hobbled Odell Beckham Jr. and a harried offensive line, their strong defense has been overworked.

Philadelphia (2-1) at L.A. Chargers (0-3)

This is the Eagles' first visit to the Los Angeles area since beating the Raiders in 1992. They don't have former Chargers standout running back Darren Sproles, who last week tore up his knee and broke his forearm.

San Francisco (0-3) at Arizona (1-2)

The Cardinals must believe the 49ers know something about personnel. There are six former 49ers on the Arizona roster: K Phil Dawson, P Andy Lee, G Alex Boone, QB Blaine Gabbert, G Mike Iupati and S Antoine Bethea. Maybe they can keep Arizona's mastery over the Niners going: The Cardinals swept all four meetings in the last two years.

Cincinnati (0-3) at Cleveland (0-3)

Once dubbed the "Battle of Ohio," this rivalry soon disintegrated into a pillow fight. Now this seems nothing more than a thumb war.

VELCRO HOPES SONG WILL STICK Sometimes people sing for love or happiness, but Velcro Companies may have achieved a first this week: it released a song to protect its trademark. The song, "Don't Say Velcro," was written by Penn Holderness and his video features actors playing trademark attorneys. It's an effort to get consumers to use the term Velcro only for the company's brand-name products while referring to others as "hook and loop." Swiss engineer George de Mestral designed Velcro in the 1940s and its name comes from velour, the French word for "velvet," and crotchet, or "hook." The patent expired in 1978, allowing

M&A? MORE LIKE EMINEM-&-A "Hi! My name is (what?)/My name is (who?)/My name is a shareholder in Royalty Flow Inc. seeking a share of royalties from the recording catalog of rap star Eminem." Alright, that's a bad lyric, but that's essentially the plan for Royalty Flow, which wants to raise up to $50 million in an initial public offering. (Get it? Flow? Like a rapper's smooth delivery?) Royalty Flow is trying to acquire royalty rights in Eminem's recordings from 1999 to 2013 and filed to list its stock on the Nasdag under the symbol "RLTY." While overall music sales have been falling for the better part of a decade, the company said Eminem's royalties grew in 2016, partly because of growing music streaming and digital downloads.

BITTER BREW Think your morning is rough now? It might get worse if you have to read a warning about the dangers of a chemical in coffee before sipping your daily pick-me-up. A nonprofit group called the Council for Education and Research on Toxics says Starbucks and some 90 other companies, like grocery stores, are failing to follow a California law that requires them to post signs about hazardous chemicals. Its lawsuit against the companies, which dates to 2010, resumed Monday. The dispute concerns a chemical called acrylamide, a carcinogen that is a natural byproduct of the coffee roasting process. The coffee companies say the amount of acrylamide in coffee is harmless. The group's lawyer says the main goal is to get the industry to remove the chemical from coffee altogether.

Sonos finds its voice

Sonos, once the dominant brand in Wi-Fi enabled smart speakers, will soon jump on the voice-activated bandwagon.

On Oct. 4, the company is expected to unveil a new model that adopts another company's voice assistant, likely Amazon's Alexa, to allow voice control of audio throughout users' homes. A recent privacy update suggested as much. A company spokeswoman said Sonos has been working with Amazon on voice, but it aims to support multiple assistants eventually

The move is an acknowledgement that Sonos lacks the engineering capability to build an artificial David Watkins, an analyst with Strategy Analytics, says Amazon's Echo will account for nearly half of all Wi-Fi enabled smart speakers this year, a perch Sonos occupied just three years ago.

Sonos's share has dropped mainly because Amazon has expanded the market, Watkins says. But to remain relevant with voice control, he says most speaker makers will have to partner to use the assistants of tech giants like Amazon, Google or Samsung, or be left behind.

InsiderQ&A Uber's new human resources officer

Liane Homsey Chief human resources officer Uber

The revelation came just weeks after Liane Hornsey joined Uber as chief human resources officer.

In February, former engineer Susan Fowler posted a blog detailing how she was propositioned by her boss and her complaints to human resources were ignored.

There were outside investigations, including one by former Attorney General Eric Holder. that found widespread harassment and bullying. Combative CEO Travis Kalanick was later ousted by a divided board. Hornsey, who was hired from her chief administrative officer post at Softbank and had spent nearly a decade leading Google's human resources department, set about trying to change Uber's culture. She spoke with The Associated Press about her work.

For a couple of months, you were without a CEO. Now you've got Dara Khosrowshahi from Expedia. How will this affect your efforts?

In all my conversations with him. he has been extremely supportive that we continue to build on the great culture work we've already done. It's absolutely top of mind for him. I know he is particularly passionate about creating a diverse and inclusive workplace for everyone. I'm confident positive cultural change is more possible than ever.

You came in before the Susan Fowler blog. Did you know the extent of the problems here? Certainly nothing along the lines of Susan Fowler. But it definitely had the reputation for being hard-charging, disruptive and rather bold. So coming in, I had understood that was the case. But the Susan Fowler blog, I've got to tell you, it just knocked this company sideward.

How are you handling so many problems at once?

After that blog, I went immediately into these listening sessions. We ran 200 of them. I send an email to all employees every two weeks saying this is what we're doing, this is where we are, this is how we're involving you. My sense is that the organization needs action and they need to know we're serious.

Is the old culture still embedded in the organization? Culture change usually takes 18 months to two years. I think it's going be quicker here. A lot of people are saying to me 'I can feel the change.

It was woefully inadequate numerically, and also there were too many junior people that were being given too much to do without enough guidance. I've concentrated on bringing in a senior team. What happens is in a startup that is super successful, that is absolutely the business end just growing, growing. Often the processes and the support functions get left behind.

Unless you're an expert in spin cycles, buying an appliance could leave you dizzy.

To make the process easier, here are answers to some questions like "When should I buy?" and "Do I really need a Repair or replace? People with appliances have two options: repair or replace.

You can count on major appliances to last about a year for every $100 spent, says Doug Rogers, president of Mr. Appliance, a national appliance-repair company. "If I bought a $100 microwave, I'm probably not going to call anyone to fix it if it's over a year old," Rogers says.

Which one to buy? Once you're in the market for something new. don't fixate on brands, unless you care about top-of-the-line prestige. No one appliance brand masters everything all the time, says Paul Hope, a senior home and appliance editor at Consumer Reports.

A "smart" appliance that works with voice-activated services like Alexa is convenient but likely costly. A counter-depth refrigerator won't stick out as far past your countertop, but it's shallower than a standard-depth fridge.

Online or in store? When you find something you like, go see it at a store. Online resources are helpful but shouldn't be the last word.

"This is one of the few industries where the online marketplace doesn't work as well as the local marketplace does," says Kevin Brasler, executive editor at the nonprofit Consumers' Checkbook

Aside from being able to see and touch the appliance, you might also avoid delivery fees by going local.

Will it fit? Before you swipe your card, make sure your appliance fits - in your home and your budget.

Measure the space where it'll go. Rogers recommends a close fit; for a 32-inch opening, get an appliance no wider than 31.5 inches.

As for price, get the model number and call five local, independent stores. Brasler says. Tell them you're shopping around and looking for the best deal. They'll often give you a quote below the advertised price, he says. "It was common for us to find that for a dishwasher, the lowest price we were quoted was $250 less than the highest price," Brasier says.

What about warranties? You're not finished yet. The salesperson may try to sell you extra protection, called a service contract, in case something goes wrong. Service contracts might cover items that are included in your standard warranty, he says, so read the fine print to Another consideration: Products don't usually break within the service plan window, according to Consumer Reports. Brasler puts it bluntly. "Don't buy those," he says. "They're totally worthless.

Cybersecurity and Your Employees

Today's businesses operate in an era of hyper-connectedness and, unfortunately, a burgeoning global cybercrime industry. It's essential to establish policies and procedures to minimize risk. One specific area on which to focus is your employees. All too often, it's a company employee who either leaves the door open for a cybercriminal or perpetrates the crime him- or herself. For this reason, it's essential for your hiring managers to be mindful of cybersecurity when reviewing employment applications and for cybersecurity policies to be crystal clear. We can help you with both cybersecurity issues and hiring

Straighten out the law

Extend equal rights to sexual orientation, gender identity

"There's just one kind of folks?

That's how Scout describes the lack of difference between people to her older brother, Jem, in "To Kill a Mockingbird."

It comes down to: Inside, despite everything, we're all the same.

Of course, not everyone thinks that, and your skin color, gender or age may determine how you are treated.

However, a lot of laws are on the books that bar discrimination for those reasons in every walk of life, including housing and employment.

entation and gender identity are fair game for evicting or firing someone. Such legislation has been introduced in the Legislature for years, but the votes have not been there for passage. In the interim, at least 11 communities in West Virginia went on to prohibit such discrimination. Each of them has adopted variations of a resolution or law supporting policies of non-discrimination in reference to sexual orientation and gender identity. All of these communities initially approved statements of support without the force of law, much like the one passed in Fairmont last month.

Morgantown also passed such a resolution supporting this concept, in February 2014.

However, at least five of these communities have since gone on to adopt full, enforceable laws.

Last week, Morgantown's City Council began considering changes that would make it the sixth to do so.

Those changes incorporate antidiscrimination language in its relevant code, giving it the status of law — with some teeth.

Along with sexual orientation and gender identity, that language includes veteran status, too.

We support making these antidiscrimination changes within our city's borders. Our newspaper is on record since March 2013 supporting a statewide law to prohibit such discrimination too.

Using people's sexual orientation. gender identity or veteran status to hire or fire them, or refuses to rent to or evict them, is wrong. Simple fairness is all the argument we need to line up on the side that supports these changes to Morgantown's code.

It's almost surreal, but more outrageous than odd, that marriage equality is the law of the land, while nondiscrimination policies still linger.

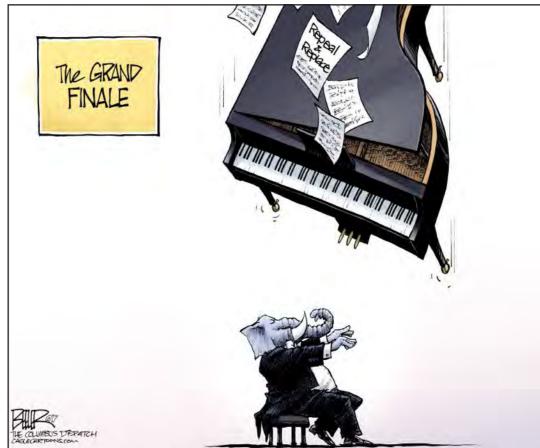

You can wed a same-sex partner, but if you're overheard discussing your spouse at work, you could be fired.

Yet, there's reason to be encouraged. The number of state communities with such resolutions and laws has doubled in the last year. This is not just a case of different strokes for different folks, either.

Advisory board needs new members

We're looking for a dozen of our readers to serve on The Dominion Post's 2017-'18 Community Advisory Board.

What does a seat on this board involve? Sharing your opinions as readily as we do here — in writing and at a monthly meeting.

The sort of board we're looking for will reflect the diverse demographics of our area readers.

The board meets monthly at 6 p.m. on the third Wednesday with representatives of The Dominion Post to discuss topics of interest in the newspaper's coverage area.

Board members will also be asked for feedback on what the newspaper does well, not so well and what it can do better.

In these meetings, we ask questions and listen more than we talk. Questions like: What did you see in the newspaper you liked this month? What did you see you didn't like? Were we fair? Were we accurate? Were we balanced?

And far be it from us or members of our advisory board to just talk. We also expect everyone to write, too, including the members of the board.

During their one-year term, board members will take turns in rotation writing a general interest column (about four or five in their one-year term). The columns are published on Monday's Opinion page.

All that's required to be considered for a seat on the board is:

■ You are at least 18 years

- You do not hold political office or sit on public boards, authorities or commissions. ■ You are not a political
- candidate. ■ You live in The Dominion Post's coverage area.

If you are interested in being considered for our advisory board, let us know in a letter that tells us a bit about yourself and what you would bring to the advisory board's table.

Be sure to include your name, address, phone number and email address. The deadline for submitting inquiries is Oct. 15.

You may write The Dominion Post, 1251 Earl L. Core Road, Morgantown, WV 26505-6298, Attention: Randy Vealey or email us, at opinion @dominionpost.com; or fax us, at 304-291-2326.

one comparing making laws to making sausages. In the case of the latest Republican effort to repeal the Affordable Care Act, however, the process and substance have both been inexcusably reckless. Now that Republican senators' lastgasp effort is dead, it's time to go back to the beginning — and to let Democrats join the process. Monday brought the sole scheduled public hearing on the Graham-Cassidy health-care bill in the Senate, which means Congress is applying roughly the same level of care and scrutiny to revolutionizing the health-care system as it generally brings to renaming a post office.

Republican leaders needed to pass a bill before Saturday, when the current fiscal year expired — and with it, authority for a reconciliation process enabling them to avoid a Democratic filibuster. They spent the last week frantically tinkering with the draft in hopes of winning 50 votes, which became increasingly unlikely after a third Republican senator, Susan Collins, of Maine, vowed to vote against the bill — for good reasons.

Graham-Cassidy would eliminate many consumer protections of the Affordable Care Act, including requirements that insurance plans cover a list of essential benefits and preventive services. It appears to leave patients with pre-existing conditions vulnerable to drastic increases in the cost of their insurance. It would cut tens of billions in federal funding in the coming decade, possibly followed by hundreds of billions in cuts after 10 years. It would dispense that reduced amount in the form of block grants to states, which would be able to spend those funds in ways that don't necessarily benefit patients.

The proposal is opposed by almost every group with a stake in American health care: Hospitals, insurers, doctors, nurses and most importantly — patients. Meanwhile, most health-care economists are either appalled, baffled or both. The Congressional Budget Office did not have time to fully analyze the bill and estimate its fiscal impact, but on Monday the CBO said it would result in loss of insurance for "millions."

Meanwhile, a bipartisan healthcare bill with the goal of improving the existing law languished in the Senate. Lamar Alexander, R-Tenn., and Patty Murray, D-Wash., had been working on a compromise to give states more flexibility in administering Obamacare in exchange for bolstering state health-insurance exchanges, which in some states were under duress even before President Trump's campaign to undermine them began this year.

Alexander said recently that he and Murray were abandoning the effort, since they were unable to build the "necessary consensus." It's hard to build consensus on repairing a law when at the same time the majority party's leaders are still bent on destroying it.

If Republicans are genuinely committed to an ideological alternative to Obamacare, they should write a plan worthy of their constituents, vet it through public hearings and open debate, and bring it to a vote next year. They are in power; that's their prerogative. Given that they have had seven years to come up with such an alternative without success, the better course would be to acknowledge the law has enabled almost 20 million Americans to obtain health insurance—and start working with Democrats to fix its flaws rather than end its benefits.

This is basically the plea that Sen. John McCain made on the Senate floor in July, when he helped kill an earlier version of a repeal bill, which also had been hastily assembled and considered.

His party didn't listen then. It should now.

At 22 MILLION PEOPLE, metropolitan Mexico City is the largest urban area in our hemisphere.

As the capital of New Spain, it governed a massive empire, stretching from the Philippines to Utah. The symbol of the eagle and the snake, which is at the center of our flag, commemorates its founding.

It is a modern-day megalopolis with pyramids, cathedrals, skyscrapers, huge parks and frantic urban blight. Uber's biggest urban market is a mecca for foodies and culture.

It is also in the center of a geological mosh pit.

On Sept. 19, 1985, an earthquake registering 8.1 on the Richter scale struck Mexico City. Partly because of inadequate building codes, the death toll reached upward of 20,000 people. Electricity, telephones, the airport, the subway - all were down for several days.

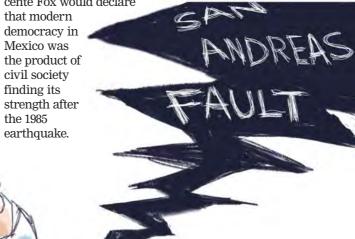

The government's failure was especially glaring. Insular and out of touch after 56 years of single-party rule, then-President Miguel de la Madrid responded testily to offers of international help by declaring, "We are self-sufficient." Reformers set to battle Trump on election finance

POLITICAL REFORMERS IN WASHINGTON appreciate three realities: Patience is a necessity, incumbent politicians don't like change, and, if the opportunity strikes, you'd better be ready (unlike the Republicans on health care this year). Those were the messages of a major effort launched Wednesday at the Brookings Institution. The focus is on campaign-finance reforms, including full disclosure of political contributions, and changes in the system for drawing congressional districts. Other goals include expanded voting rights and stronger ethics rules.

The movers, including leading reform groups and New Mexico Sen. Tom Udall and North Carolina Rep. David Price, both Democrats, know this is an uphill struggle: Supreme Court rulings have released a torrent of unregulated big money into political campaigns, and GOP congressional leaders and President Trump will resist changes.

But reformers like Norm Eisen, the board chairman of the Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington, see the president as an unwitting asset. "Trump is the most unethical president we've had in the modern era," charges Eisen, who was the White House ethics counsel under President Obama. "But the damage he has done to the values of good government may make it easier to rally bipartisan support for reform."

Once there was bipartisan support for political reforms, going back to House Republican leaders like John Anderson and Barber Conable in the 1970s and '80s to Sen. John McCain in the past few decades. But the only Republican at the session Wednesday was Richard Painter, the White House ethics counsel for George W. Bush and an arch-critic of Trump's ethics.

On campaign finance, there will be two main objectives. One is to push for full disclosure of political donations. The Supreme Court has ruled this is constitutional, though Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell is a formidable foe of transparency There will also be a push for federal matching funds for small contributions, perhaps $5 for every private dollar, to help serve as an alternative to the political donations of the wealthy. A range of politicians from Obama to Bernie Sanders to Trump did well with small contributions, and the matching-fund system has worked well in several states and localities.

As for redistricting, the reform advocates want independent commissions to draw congressional lines, a system that has been adopted by four states: California, Arizona, Idaho and Washington. It creates more competitive and less partisan districts. Politicians of both parties have been responsible for some egregious examples of partisan gerrymandering.

With the system in most states, said Fred Wertheimer, of Democracy 21, "We're allowing representatives to choose their voters rather than voters choosing their representatives." There are legal challenges to gerrymandering in states like Wisconsin and Maryland.

And the reformers will seek to protect and broaden access to the ballot, after a number of states made voting harder, especially for minorities. This comes at a time when a commission established by Trump seems intent on toughening voting requirements under the false pretense of preventing fraud.

There will be proposals to tighten conflict-of-interest and ethics rules for both the executive branch and Congress.

If all this feels like tilting at windmills, consider that even some bread-and-butter strategists see it as winning issue.

"Unless you talk about reforming the system, most voters won't listen to you on other issues," said James Carville, the Bill Clinton campaign strategist who was the source of the mantra, "It's the economy, stupid." (He also said, "Don't forget health care.") He urges Democrats to make reform a priority in the 2018 elections. Wertheimer, the grandfather of these political reformers who goes back to Watergate, keeps a quotation from Nelson Mandela on his desktop: "It always seems impossible until it's done.'

Vote no Oct. 7 on state road bond amendment

On Oct. 7, the citizens of West Virginia will get to vote on Gov. Jim Justice's "Roads to Prosperity" Senate Joint Resolution 6. I believe this is another political financial boondoggle in the making and a "no" vote is highly recommended to stop it.

Recently, the state Legislature passed increases on gasoline taxes (now among the 10 highest in the country), DMV fees, tax of automobile purchases and turnpike tolls. These increases are projected to bring in $3.2 billion over the next 25 years, which is almost $130 million a year. I think all would agree this is quite a lot of money and would fix a lot of roads and bridges over that period of time.

What the politicians want to do is to borrow $1.6 billion by selling West Virginia bonds to investors and use the $130 million a year to pay them back over the next 25 years. The interest and fees on that amount of money over that period could very well amount to another $1.6 billion and added to the principal means a total of $3.2 billion paid back.

Simply put, if this proposal passes, for the next 25 years, every $1 we pay from our pockets for the new taxes and fees will result in only 50 cents going to road construction, the other 50 cents going to pay back the bonds.

This proposed amendment once again proves legislators refuse to be fiscally responsible and "pay as you go" and get us full value for our taxes. They want a big pile now to dole out and let the out-of-state bond issuers and buyers take 50 percent right out of our pockets. As citizens, let's tell them enough is enough.

Please take the time to go vote "no" to this wasteful proposal on Oct. 7.

'What we will tolerate, and what we won't'

Seemingly, the current controversy over kneeling during the playing of our national anthem by NFL players is less about freedom of speech than it is about public decency. Decency is defined as behavior that conforms to accepted standards of morality or respectability.

Celebrity Mike Rowe has said, "The real controversy here isn't about patriotism, social justice, racial inequality, or free speech. It's not even about the flag or the national anthem. It's really only about one thing — what we will tolerate, and what we won't."

What a shame that so many find it necessary to narrowly self identify with issues identified as white, black, brown, vellow or otherwise. For we all really belong to one race — the human race.

I feel fortunate to have lived and worked with and for people of all different backgrounds and as a result, I have reaffirmed something I already knew. We all have the same wants and desires for ourselves and our families. As so aptly and succinctly put by the father of modern day psychology, Abraham Maslow, we all are seeking to fulfill our basic human needs of affection, belonging and recognition.

To those who continue to see the world in racial or racist terms, it's time to recognize both our rights and responsibilities as decent members of the human race. Why not try to work together in a most civil, reasonable and harmonious fashion as a united people for the common good? Will we or must we tolerate any less?

Don't mortgage state's future for road bonds

I'd like to thank Cindy Frich for quickly organizing a bond forum with Secretary of Transportation Tom Smith, present to answer any questions that constituents may have prior to casting their vote.

As appreciative as I am, I don't feel that the questions were adequately answered to support a "yes" vote, and here's why.

Secretary Smith likened the bond to a home mortgage where the voters are the bank and the government is the home buyer. He is asking us, the bank, to float his bond, the mortgage, on a conceptual plan that has not been fully devised, studied and audited.

When pressed for details regarding the I-79 connector (in Monongalia County), he continued to fall back on his recurring response of "to be determined," re-emphasizing that the lines on the map are conceptual lines.

Well, I am sorry. What bank will give a home buyer a mortgage for a home that is just an idea? Banks require a home inspection, title searches and income verification. If building a new home, they'd want to see the architectural designs of the house, cost estimates and building time frame. None of which Smith could provide.

The only details provided were that the I-79 connector would be a four-lane highway with limited access, which was denied by Bill Austin, executive director of Morgantown's Metropolitan Planning Organization on WAJR radio but later confirmed by him at the forum.

So which is it? I'm sorry. No mortgage for you. You can't meet the basic requirements.

The right to not watch football

IS IT THE BEGINNING OF THE END OF PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL?

I don't know, but Quarterback Donald Trump threw a wild rhetorical pass intercepted by the National Football League that then fumbled the ball.

Referees disguised as pundits issued their penalties and here was a game everyone lost, especially the fans.

That weekend's over, but what we had was 200 of some 1,600 professional football players kneeling during the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner." They were spurred on by Trump, who was himself spurred on by Colin Kaepernick.

Last year, as a second-string quarterback with the San Francisco 49ers, Kaepernick openly and clearly said America wasn't much of a country because it was oppressing blacks. He then underlined his contempt by kneeling instead of standing up during the singing of the national anthem at the opening of games. A number of onlookers, including President Barack Obama, said, hey, that's his free-speech right.

Free speech was not the issue. While politicizing a sport that doesn't exist for his playacting, Kaepernick was more egregiously disrespecting not just the flag and the anthem, but of what they stand for — perhaps the most extraordinary nation ever, a place whose ideals have conquered and are still conquering its faults.

Should Kaepernick, who, by the way, has climbed to multimillionaire, ultra-privileged status in this land he sees as forlorn, have abandoned his racial concerns? No. He has found other meaningful ways to address such matters and he could have stuck with them without abandoning love of

Yes, Trump went way too far — he should have simply said there are more effective and noble ways to make your case.

But other players imitated his disrespect, especially after he left the 49ers and nobody else signed him up, maybe thinking his kneeling a minus his skills did not make up for. So you have Trump giving a political speech in Alabama, figuring North Korea, health care and tax reform enough to talk about and diving into this issue. He made good points about giving our heritage a chance but then added:

"Wouldn't you love to see one of these NFL owners, when somebody disrespects our flag, to say, 'Get that son of a b off the field right now, out, he's fired'?"

The NFL, which once would not allow the Dallas Cowboys to wear helmet decals honoring slain policemen, came together in a second. It defied not only Trump with the kneeling, but America. Yes, Trump went way too far — he should have simply said there are more effective and noble ways to make your case. But the NFL should also have stayed cool. Instead, it defied a positive norm that helps define us and got its first try at a sports event during the Civil War, which freed the slaves.

Many fans, it might be noted, are seeking an occasional retreat from politics and other entanglements through the drama of the field that makes hand-holders of people about as diverse as diversity gets. Communities become more solid. Fans of this team or that - I am a Denver Broncos guy myself could now be banging into each other with large numbers watching ever less football so that this national celebration of ours becomes more nearly a whimper.

What makes that more likely is the horrible concussion issue, something Trump made light of during his speech, and the accusation that you're racist if you object to the kneeling. When logic fails, try name-calling, the more vicious the better.

It meanwhile does my heart no good that players from other sports are joining in, that a congresswoman did her own kneeling bit on the House floor and that Kaepernick is jolly about Cuba, a country that tolerates free speech to the extent of sometimes not imprisoning you for all that long.

OK, I can understand a one-time reaction Trump's trumpeting.

But if the disrespect continues, I am going to exercise my rights. I will turn off the TV.

city's 15,000 CCTV cameras. Up to 90 seconds' warning can make the difference between deaths in the hundreds or the thousands.

Thirty-two years ago, the federal government turned away help that already had arrived at the Mexico City airport (including a Swiss canine unit trained to find bodies after an avalanche — a transferable skill. My father, the ambassador to Switzerland at the time, managed to get them into the city despite official disapproval.).

This time, the Mexican tax authorities are waiving import duties on international goods sent to help emergency efforts. Cellphone service is available, and Wi-Fi hot spots are free. Uber is shuttling volunteers to rescue operations. Amazon Mexico teamed up with the Red Cross to create a massive relief "wish list" so good Samaritans can donate directly. Google Maps helped us identify the location of collapsed buildings so we can channel aid there.

Since 1985, we built what is arguably the most sophisticated electoral system in the world. We went from being a country dependent on petrodollars to one that is a manufacturing powerhouse, with a diversified economy that is among the biggest in the world.

One thing that has not changed: The awe-inspiring selflessness and generosity that Mexicans show in crises. It was the driving force behind the civilian activism that transformed the country in the 1980s and 1990s. And it is evident today, even (perhaps especially) among the more than half of the population that hadn't been born in 1985. That is particularly relevant now, when egotism is not only ubiquitous, but often celebrated. Not here. Not today.

Of course, there's more work to be done. But if we created a democracy from the rubble of 1985, we can strengthen that democracy from the rubble of 2017, ending corruption and impunity in the same way that we ended single-party rule. As the dust settles, the signs are good.

Flipping out over flea market show

LAST SUNDAY, WHILE on a walk with the dog, a house in my neighborhood caught my attention.

Or rather, the junk on the porch did.

It wasn't a new route for Moo and me, nor was it a new house. In fact, I've probably strolled past it a dozen times since I moved over that way.

I may have even commented on it once or twice, complaining about said junk on the porch.

But on this particular day that stuff struck me differently.

"Hmmm, I thought," gazing at the broken-down oven near the front door. "I wonder what I could do with that. Turn it into a wine bar, maybe."

Then I turned my gaze to the two chairs flanking it, their once-woven seats now decided unwoven, the wood dull and stained, the legs on one knocked akimbo.

"I could reupholster those in a bright fabric and hit them with a coat of pretty paint," I thought. "Good as new.

"And that moth-eaten stool over there has some promise ...'

Now, I don't know how to upholster. Or make wine bars. Or refurbish appliances into, well, anything.

Honestly, I can barely paint. I had, however, just watched two complete seasons of "Flea Market Flip" — the latest in a long line of inferior replacements for my beloved "Great British Baking Show" — in less than 48 hours.

Which, if you've seen it, is basically the equivalent of staying at a Holiday Inn last night, in terms of making one into an expert in refurbishment.

But in that moment, I believed. In my defense, I do shop at flea markets. A maximalist when it comes to decorating, and a lover of vintage finds and weird things, I can't pass up an opportunity to nab that next treasure.

I'm always on the lookout for blown-glass paperweights, antique colored glass, mid-century modern furniture, cool salt and pepper shakers, art deco and mod pieces and, it seems, anything painted turquoise.

What I am not, unfortunately, is crafty. So, while I can see the potential in, say, a worn-out Regency armchair, I can't actually fix it up myself.

In other words, I am the person those "Flea Market Flip" competitors are selling to at the end of each episode, not a qualified competitor myself.

But standing there on that corner on Overdale, I had the kind of formidable confidence only acquired through one of three things: Years and years of practice; raw, unbridled talent; or too much time in front of the TV.

Besides, surely if that pair of arty idiots on the show could convince someone to pay $1,050 for a rusty bicycle with a board attached to the top (billed as a "mobile dining unit"), I could muster the skills to convert a chair into a slightly better chair and make a few bucks myself,

Or how about those contestants who just put a piece of glass on top of anything and call it a coffee table? I could do that, too.

"Have you even spray-painted that one picture frame you bought at the thrift store like three months ago yet?" Dan asked me, when I mentioned my budding (in my head, at least) new career.

Answer: Nope.

I reality, I know will stick with my current role as customer, shopping my beloved fleas not for items I can re-do, but that have already been redone for me.

And paying way too much. Perhaps if my new best friend Lara Spencer can teach me to do anything useful, it will be to

Though given how much I hate haggling, that's about as likely as my learning how to make a lion's

If mystery, spookiness and intrigue are your jam, we have party planning ideas for the entire fam. From scary to supernatural, there's something for everyone to take advantage of this fall

Fright night

There's nothing like the spooky silver screen to inspire a perfect fright night for friends and family. Take the lead from Greg Jenkins of Bravo Productions (bravoevents-online.com) and build a theme from a favorite film or TV series.

"One of my favorite television shows is HBO's 'True Blood,' and one of my favorite Halloween genre movies is 'Interview with a Vampire.' "Jenkins says. "In tune with the feeling vampires invoke, think about a New Orleans type setting."

To create a vampire-inspired atmosphere, Jenkins recommends creating a dark, balmy atmosphere with sparsely lit candles and Spanish moss hung from the trees and perhaps a makeshift cemetery.

"Add some exotic props such as a Voodoo woman, wroughtiron fences, canning jars filled with all manner of icky things (fake blood, eyeballs, etc.) and, to up the scary, place labels on the jars with guest names on

Old lanterns and dusty, antiquated books on end and side tables make for perfect decor

What better drink to serve than a Vampires Kiss cocktail, courtesy of Wanderspice.com: cola, red wine, gold leaf and Gold Lustre Dust over a couple of cubes of dry ice.

For vamps in search of sustenance, there are no shortages of creepy creations that can be made out of BBQ ribs (like attaching them to a fake skull!), or, you can always go with a platter of spaghetti a la eyeball (made out of meatballs, jack cheese and black olives).

Supernatural subtlety

For some, scary may simply equate to having enough food for everyone, or the time in which to prepare it all. If that's the case, a color-theme may be the way to go. Orange, black and purple is a fun color combo to apply to all Halloween festivities.

"Stock up on black and orange spray paint," recommends Jeanine Boiko, DIY blogger and Etsy shop owner (Okio B Designs). "Anything can be spray painted to add a spooky touch to your decorations. My black wine bottles were a big hit last year. I simply painted each bottle black and then dripped white candle wax on the bottoms for a creepy look."

Boiko also suggests hitting up thrift stores for other types of glass and wood ware that can be repurposed and upcycled to create an eek-factor.

"Home Goods also has a good selection of creepy candles in black, orange, purple and gray," Boiko says.

To make an entrance (literally), Lowes has a step-by-step

Scary DIY Halloween Window Screen project. With the help of a hot glue gun, heavy-duty stapler, utility scissors, roll of aluminum or fiberglass screen, shelf liner and lattice strip (lowes.com) a screen scene with black bats and a spooky old tree can greet guests. If possible, backlight the screen to create a light-purple hue. Of course, no fall festivity is complete without pumpkins. The popular seasonal squash will definitely bring out the orange of any decorative arrangement.

But that's not all — don't forget their edible offerings: pumpkin soup, pumpkin alfredo pasta and as many variations of pumpkin spice that

Literary legends

Although haunted houses, ghosts and ghouls are surely all-time frightening favorites, they can be unnerving, too especially for little ones. In the event that literary classics such as "Frankenstein" and "Dracula," or more modern tales such as "Twilight," "Shadow Hunters" or even "Harry Potter" are too scary for a younger crowd, there's a spookily sweet alternative.

Art up Close! program looks at Fairey's work with Cal U prof

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The "Shepard Fairey: Work Against the Clampdown" exhibition at the Art Museum of WVU will be the topic of the next Art Up Close! on Tuesday.

Presented by Michael Slaven, professor of history and chair of the department of history, politics, society and law at California University of Pennsylvania, the program begins at 5:30 p.m. in the Museum Education Center Grand Hall and is free and open to the public.

Slaven will discuss the ways in which art, and specifically Fairey's works of art, can be used to influence, or even create new conceptions about culture, politics and society.

Slaven graduated with a doctorate degree in European history from WVU after completing a dissertation on the uses of political propaganda produced in France during the 1640s and 1650s. He has broad intellectual interests, and has written on contemporary art, European monarchies, political revolts in France and

WVSO launches 'Playing It Forward' campaign

Submitted to The Dominion Post

CHARLESTON — The West Virginia Symphony Orchestra (WVSO) has launched a $3 million "Playing It Forward" endowment campaign.

Moments before the WVSO's new conductor, Lawrence Loh, took to the stage for the first time as music director, Vice President of Development Pamela Murchison recognized four donors whose contributions will help to support three new endowed chairs and a string education program that provides free music lessons to more than 400 students each year.

WVSO President Joe Tackett said contributions to the endowment, the WVSO's first campaign in nearly 10 years, will provide operating support for educational programs and performances that impact the lives of thousands of West Virginians of all ages. The funds will be permanently restricted and housed in the WVSO Foundation, Inc.

While overwhelming financial challenges in recent years silenced other orchestras across the country, the WVSO has expanded its reach beyond Charleston to include performances and music education programs in Morgantown, Parkersburg, Fairmont, Lewisburg and beyond.

In 2016, the symphony ended the season with its first balanced budget in several seasons after right-sizing the orchestra, returning to singlenight performances in Charleston and relocating is offices Charleston's West Side.

Tackett said these tough decisions, coupled with the endowment drive, will enable the WVSO to continue to bring the joys of hearing live professional orchestral music to more than 40,000 people across the state and provide music educational programs to more than 11,000 young West Virginians each year.

Endowment donations can be made by check or credit card and should be mailed to the WVSO Foundation at P.O. Box 2292, Charleston, W.Va., 25328, Supporters interested in naming opportunities for orchestra chairs are encouraged to contact Murchison at 304-957-9879 or pmurchison@wvsymphony.org.

Suggestions to make America whole again

INDIVIDUALLY AND AS A COUNTRY we need to believe in the mezuzah.

The commandment to bind God's words to the doorposts of our houses is biblical, but as with so many biblical laws, the details of how exactly to do it are omitted. How to bind them is never explained in the Torah. This produced a dispute in the 11th century about how to affix the mezuzah (which is the box with the commandment inside it). Rashi thought the mezuzah case should be nailed up horizontally and his nephew thought it should be nailed up vertically. The compromise, which was finally attributed to Rabbi Jacob ben Asher, author of the Arba'ah Turim in the 12th century (see Menachot 33a) was the ruling that the mezuzah had to be inclined on an angle pointing into the house midway between horizontal and vertical.

The mezuzah represents the spirit of compromise, but compromise is not a tactic; it is a virtue that depends upon humility. Our greatest leader was Moses, and the highest praise for Moses in the Torah was not that he was a powerful man but that he was a humble man. Humility and compromise are the deepest lessons of the slanted mezuzah, and they are surely the deepest virtues we need now to bring America together again and to bring our lives together again. I wish I could hang a mezuzah on the doors of Congress.

We can and must try to integrate the lessons of the mezuzah into our own personal spiritual journeys. How often are our personal problems the result of stubbornly wanting things our way no matter the cost? How many times could we bring silly family squabbles to an end if the spirit of compromise informed us and our families. Perhaps that is why we are commanded to kiss the mezuzah before we enter our home and not as we leave it. We are thus taught to have an act of compromise precede us into the place where it is needed most.

Individually and as a country we need to believe in ki karov hu.

In Exodus 13:17-18 we read, "And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God did not lead them through the land of the Philistines, even though it was nearer." (ki karov hu).

In selecting the route of the Exodus, God specifically chose not to take the shortest way to Canaan, but the long way around. God feared that the short way would bring the danger of war, and war would cause fear, and fear would cause the people to run back to Egyptian

I would, however, translate ki karov hu not as "even though it was nearer" but rather as "because it was close." God took the people the long way around not only as a tactic to avoid war. God chose it precisely because it was the long way around. God knew that shortcuts never work. God knew that simple external solutions never work. God knew that the point of the Exodus was not getting the people out of Egypt but getting Egypt out of the people and that internal Exodus would take time and patience and wisdom. Those are exactly the virtues we need now to save our lives and to save America. We need political patience for America to go the long way around to making America truly the promised land for all Amer-

Ex still huge part of family

Q: I have been divorced for five years. It was an amicable divorce. We both have been in long-term relationships. Our kids are grown and have their own families. My ex is still a HUGE part of my family. Goes to events, holidays if I'm not there and my family spends time with him all the time. Call me selfish but, when does this end? While I'm glad he is close to my nieces and nephews, it just seems a bit much. My boundaries seem not to matter. It hurts my feelings that my parents choose him over me. What's good ex-etiquette?

A: I'm always surprised by how often I get asked this, or some variance of this question. It seems to all boil down to "him or me" — and I can't believe they're choosing him.

The truth is, they're not, but they may be choosing both of you. That doesn't mean they like him best, it means they recognize that he is your ex, but he is also their grandchildren's father or their children's uncle, and that doesn't stop because the two of are no longer together.

The big question is, how do you maneuver that?

It seems your family has already figured that out. Your question stated that your ex "goes to events and holidays if I'm not there," so, although you may think your family is choosing him, they are respecting your position. It also appears that they may think of him as your family representative if you aren't there — and that can be irritating if they still see him as family and you do not — particularly if both of you have new partners.

Everyone wants these relationships clearly defined and put into nice little neat boxesthe ex-box, the new partner box — put the top on and don't let anyone out when the other is there — certainly don't have allegiance to old when the new one is around. But, it's just not like that. Unlike years ago when exes didn't interact once divorced, today's relationships are not necessarily severed just because two people break-up. Joint custody of the children puts everyone in contact with each other, the kids go back and forth, and in the midst of all that, the extended family

Why won't today's teens grow up?

Q: Back when I was in high school, all I wanted was to be independent. I wanted more responsibility, a job so I could have my own spending money, and I was obsessed with getting a girlfriend. I experimented with drinking alcohol and, well, a few other things. I'm asking because my two teens have zero interest in any of that — and as far as I can tell, neither do their friends. Is there something different about teens today or am I imagining things?

A: You're not imagining. Teens and young adults these days are very different than we were their age when we were doing many of the things you described. San Diego State University researcher Jean Twenge and her Bryn Mawr College colleague Heejung Park just published a study that confirmed what a lot of us have long suspected: Compared to their parents and grandparents, today's young people are much less mature, much less interested in taking on the trappings of adulthood, and are content to be dependent on their parents for far longer.

The quest for independence starts very early. Remember back when your kids were 2 and wanted to do everything themselves? And when they were three or four and wanted to do everything we did, whether it was talking on the phone, working on the computer, or washing dishes? That process — of seeking independence and engaging in adult-like activities — continues through adolescence and, theoretically at least, ends at actual adulthood.

But as Twenge and Park found, today's teens are in no hurry to grow up. Their study looked at teenage behavior going back as far as the mid-to-late 1970s and up through 2016. Let me give you a few examples.

ASK MR. DAD

■ From 1976-1979, 76 percent of 12th graders were earning at least some money. From 1990-1994, that number had dropped a little, to 72 percent. But from 2010-2016, only 55 percent of teens were earning any money on their own.

■ In the 1970s, 88 percent of 12th graders had a driver's license, 84 percent in the early 90s, and just 73 percent today.

■ In the early 1990s, 72 percent of 10th graders and 84 percent of 12th graders had ever had a date. Today, only 57 percent of 10th graders and 63 percent of 12th graders have dated.

■ In the 1990s, 81 percent of 12th graders, 72 percent of 10th graders, and 56 percent of 8th graders had tried alcohol. Today, those numbers have dropped to 67 percent, 51 percent, and 29 percent, respectively. Over that same period, even college-age and post-college young people are refraining from drinking.

■ Today's teens are less likely than those 20 years ago to go out without their parents, to go on dates, or to have sex.

The big question, of course, is "Why is this happening?" I think some of the decline — particularly in dating and going out without parents — is the result of smartphones and social media. With all the technology that's available, today's teens may actually be communicating with each other more than we did at their age. Although, if your goal is to have sex, there's no substitute for in-person communication. But we can't blame smartphones for everything. As Twenge and Park write, it's "unclear how internet use could cause teens to work less and drink alcohol less.'

Car travel tips for riding with dogs

The Modesto Bee (TNS)

The cooler fall temperatures allow many dog enthusiasts to resume the enjoyable act of taking our dogs along with us in the car. Even the most dreaded errands are made easier with our happy little dog along for the ride.

Your vehicle should always be packed with the basic dog necessities: a leash (no retractable leashes in public areas, please) and secure collar for potty breaks, a supply of water and a bowl to pour it in, poop bags, and some tasty treats and chews to keep your pooch occupied while alone in the car.

Although it's obvious that dogs love hanging their heads out the window as we rush along, there is a risk of injury to the eyes from colliding with insects, weed seed and other debris. It's best to crack the windows only, or take the time to teach your dog that wearing goggles is perfectly normal and use them on car trips to protect the eyes.

Without question, the safest way for dogs to travel in the car is secured in a crate. In the event of an accident, if the dog is ejected he will most likely survive if crated, and will not be able to run away in a panic from the scene. Another option for securing your dog is via a canine seatbelt.

Allowing a dog to ride loose in the back of a pickup is not only extremely dangerous, it's illegal. He must be tethered, but this is still not a safe form of transport as it leaves him exposed to flying debris and extremely vulnerable in the event of an accident. Improperly tethered dogs can jump or fall out of the truck bed and hang themselves.

A sobering fact that takes a lot of fun out of having your dog along for company is the risk of theft. Always lock your doors when running errands, and crack the windows enough for ventilation only. Think ahead about where you'll be going and leave your dog at home if you feel you'll be in an unsafe or risky area.

Take the time to teach your dog appropriate car riding behavior if he remains loose, which includes leaving the driver alone. Drivers have enough to focus on without having to deal with incessant barking, ear licking or overly eager lap jumpers. Teach your dog the rules of the car during special training sessions when you are not the driver, or from a parked position if you are alone. Attach a leash if needed, and use it to gently teach your dog where his boundaries are. If limited to the back seat, make sure he is placed back in that direction each time he attempts to move to the front. Giving him a delicious project to chew on —like a bone, tendon, pig ear or Kong filled with cheese or peanut butter — will help settle him down and keep him safely in the back long term.

has been a steady increase of Marion County residents traveling to WVU Medicine clinics in the Morgantown area for care. From 2013 to 2016, there was a 129 percent increase in clinic visits.

Dr. Judie Charlton, chief medical officer of WVU Medicine, said the facility's services were determined by a community assessment and that further services may be added or tweaked to meet the population's needs.

"We noted that the healthcare landscape was changing and evolving in many communities as time goes on," she said. "It's no different in Marion County. We wanted to create a facility that will be flexible enough to adapt to future healthcare needs and challenges as they arise."

To showcase the new building and providers, a community open house is planned for 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Oct. 21. Watch for more details.

See an eye doctor to treat pink eye, other eye problems

Q: I read that antibiotics are overused these days, but my daughter has pink eye a couple times a year and seems to need something. What should I do?

A: Of course, our tendency to overprescribe antibiotics is a concern, although most patients actually prefer to leave the office with a prescription. A new study in the journal Ophthalmology concludes that nearly 60 percent of patients are incorrectly given antibiotics for conjunctivitis, the medical name for pink eye.

The study also found that most eye prescriptions are being given by non-eye specialists — meaning family physicians, pediatricians or urgent care centers. No reason was established why general physicians prescribe antibiotics so readily, but differentiating the cause of a red eye can be daunting. Generally, optometric physicians and ophthalmologists rely on specialized eye microscopes to examine the eyes to better pin down the actual cause(s). And of course, we only treat eye problems while your family doctor has a lot more "territory" to cover and worry about every day.

Interestingly, patients also filled the prescriptions more often when written by those sources than by the eye doctor. No one seems to know why, but it is paradoxical that the "experts" in eye care are ignored more in actually filling the medication Rx than non-eye docs!

The bottom line is this: When your daughter has a flare up of her pink eye, you should probably take her to your eye doctor for diagnosis and treatment. Our experience indicates that other medications or treatment approaches may be safer and more effective. As just one example, fairly common problems with oil glands in the eyelids can cause recurrent pink-eye appearance. Eyelid hygiene with lid cleansers and specific heat application may prevent those recurrences without any antibiotics.

We sometimes use the expression that we are your "primary care provider (PCP) for eye care," analogous to your general PCP for the rest of your overall health. Maybe choose your provider along those lines.

Pierre's antics win again at a pool closing

WARM WEATHER NOT WITH-STANDING, we decided to close the pool. Rob called Terry, the pool man, and before long, Terry's big Pool Store truck was pulling into our driveway.

Pierre insists on welcoming any and all visitors. Terry is no exception, being one of Pierre's favorite people. He always greets Pierre with petting, a scratch behind the ears and some attentive conversation. As soon as he heard Terry's voice in the backyard, the big dog ran out, with loud barks and much tail wagging.

I was determined to keep a wary eye on Pierre. He had been headstrong lately, insisting on doing whatever he wanted.

whenever he wanted to do it. Terry was too busy to have an enthusiastic dog at his heels, and Pierre would be miserable if I put him inside the house, away from all the action. So I settled on the back patio with a book.

Pierre was at the other end of the yard, sitting on the grass by the pool steps, chewing his rubber duck. Suddenly, he began an insistent barking. I recognized that bark. It was the

"I dropped my duck in the pool, stop whatever you're doing and get it for me" bark. I knew he would keep it up until his duck was retrieved. No reason he couldn't jump in and grab the toy himself. He wanted someone else to get it and throw it, so he could play "fetch."

With a resigned sigh, I stood up to get the duck. Terry stopped me. "I'm closer," he said. That was the beginning of a "throw and fetch" session. I couldn't let Terry interrupt his work, so I did most of the duck-throwing for Pierre.

Finally, the dog seemed satisfied to lie down on the pool surround next to a small table. I went back to my book. When I looked up, I saw Pierre sitting up, holding Terry's coiled plastic rope in his mouth. In front of him, one of Terry's padded knee protectors was lying on the grass.

Terry set the rope and knee protectors on the table, not realizing Pierre would consider them an interesting chew. I ran over to the dog, yelling, "Leave it!" Pierre dropped the rope, quickly picked up Terry's knee protector and danced away from me. Obviously, he was in gameplaying mode.

Calling him and giving the "leave it" command accomplished nothing, except convincing him we were playing a great game. While he pranced around with the knee protector in his mouth, I tore into the house and grabbed his small bag of chicken treats. Even offering the whole bag of chicken to him had no effect on Pierre, who was having a great time tossing the knee protector in the air and catching it.

Finally, I hit on pretending to eat one of the chicken pieces. That did it. Pierre decided I must be munching something special. He dropped the protector and ran down to share my goodies.

After I hauled him into the house, I checked the knee protector. It was slobbery but unharmed. Fortunately, Pierre has the "soft mouth" of his golden retriever mother. I wiped off the knee protector, coiled the rope and put them both back on the small table. It was only by chance that Terry was too preoccupied with the pool house pump to witness any of this.

Then it occurred to me that Pierre once again got away with doing exactly what he wanted, when he wanted. It was only by trickery that I had made him give up his game.

Sandy LeDonne, with KLM Properties Inc., was awarded the National Association of Realtors (NAR) Green Designation, the only green real estate professional designation recognized by NAR.

LeDonne achieved this prestigious designation after completing 18 hours of course work designed specifically for Realtors. Saudi women will drive, but may not buy new cars

Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — What's your dream car to drive? Saudi women are asking that question after the kingdom announced that females would be granted licenses and be allowed to drive for the first time.

An Arabic Twitter hashtag asking women what car they want to drive already had more than 22,000 responses Thursday. Some users shared images of black matte luxury SUVs. Others teased with images of metallic candy pink-colored cars. A few shared images of cars encrusted with sparkly crystals.

Car makers see an opportunity to rev up sales in Saudi Arabia when the royal decree comes into effect next June. But any gains are likely to be gradual due to a mix of societal and economic factors. Women who need to get around already have cars driven by chauffeurs. And many women haven't driven in years, meaning the next wave of buyers could be the young.

That didn't keep Ford and Volkswagen from trying to make the most of the moment. They quickly released ads on Twitter congratulating Saudi women on the right to drive. Saudi Arabia was the only country in the world to still bar man to buy a car or take on women from getting behind the wheel.

American automaker Ford's ad showed only the eves of a woman in a rearview mirror with the words: "Welcome to the driver's seat." German automaker Volkwagen's ad showed two hands on a steering wheel with intricate henna designs on the fingers with the words: "My turn."

Checking that optimism will be the reality that many women will continue to need the approval of a new responsibilities.

"The family has always operated on the basis of dependency so that's a big core restructuring of the family unit," Madeha Alajroush, who took part in Saudi Arabia's first campaign to push for the right to drive, said. In that 1990 protest, 47 women were arrested. They faced stigmatization, lost their jobs and were barred from traveling abroad for a year.

"I had no idea it was going to take like 27 years. but anyway, we need to celebrate," Alajroush said.

That won't entail buying a new car, though. She hasn't driven in nearly 30 years, she said, and her two daughters still need to learn how to operate a vehicle.

Allowing women the right to drive is seen not only as a major milestone for women's rights in Saudi Arabia, but also for the Saudi economy. The kingdom's young and powerful crown prince is behind a wide-reaching plan to transform the country.

Media stages blackout over pressure on press

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Serbia — Serbia's embattled independent media staged a blackout Thursday to warn against what they said is Serbian leader Aleksandar Vucic's muzzling of the press by intimidation, threats and financial pressure.

Dozens of Serbian media outlets and nongovernment organizations darkened their web pages for one hour at noon, with a white inscription warning: "This is what it looks like when there is no free press!" Some newspapers appeared on newsstands with a black ribbon printed on their front pages as part of the protest dubbed "STOP media darkness in Serbia.'

Protest organizers, in a statement, said the campaign aimed to alert the public "that the media freedom in our country is dying and that we all must fight to preserve it."

The initiative was prompted by the recent closure of an independent newspaper in southern Serbia and public attacks on journalists by a ruling party. Journalists in Serbia said the media situation has been worsening in the past years, despite the country's proclaimed goal of joining the European Union, which demands press freedom.

Vucic, a former extreme nationalist who now calls himself a reformist, dismissed the accusations of media crackdown as attempts to discredit his government. Critics said Western officials turned a blind eye to Vucic's stifling of democratic freedoms in Serbia as long as he cooperated in maintaining stability in the volatile Balkans.

"These latest incidents are just a symbol of the media darkness in Serbia, which did not begin yesterday," Slavisa Lekic, head of Serbia's independent journalists association, told The Associated Press. "We have decided to open the eyes of the public and ask them to show solidarity with the journalists."

Serbia's Culture and Information Ministry, which is in charge of the media, did not respond to a request for comment. The minister, Vladan Vukosavljevic, told the Insider news portal that he was away on an official trip to China.

Thursday's action was boycotted by mainstream media and the official journalists' association, which said the protest was aimed at dividing the press into "ours and theirs."

Vucic, a former information minister from the 1990s' when independent media were fined and shut down, publicly has denounced any attacks and pressure on journalists.

U.S. stocks edge higher as health care companies rise

Associated Press

NEW YORK — U.S. stocks are slightly higher Thursday as health care companies rise. AbbVie jumped after it reached a deal with a competitor that would delay competition for its anti-inflammatorv treatment Humira, the biggest-selling drug in the world. Technology companies and banks are also up. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 2 points, or 0.1 percent, to 2,509 as of 3:15 p.m. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 47 points, or 0.2 percent, to 22,388. The Nasdaq composite shed 3 points, or 0.1 percent, to 6,449. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks rose 4 points, or 0.3 percent, to 1,488. The Russell 2000 is at all-time highs and is coming off its biggest daily gain in six months.

September is historically a weak month for stocks, as the S&P 500 falls about 0.5 percent in September on average. But the index is up 1.5 percent this month, on track for its sixth consecutive monthly gain.

Drugmaker AbbVie climbed after it resolved a patent dispute over Amgen's version of AbbVie's drug Humira, which is the source of most of its revenue. Amgen agreed not to begin selling its version of the anti-inflammatory medicine in Europe until October 2018, and the U.S. version won't go on the market until Jan. 31, 2023.

The settlement would mean billions of dollars in additional sales for AbbVie, which reported $16 billion in Humira sales in 2016. Its stock gained $4.59, or 5.4 percent, to $89.34. Amgen rose 30 cents to $185.18.

Abbott Laboratories jumped after the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approved its FreeStyle Libre Flash glucose monitoring system for adults with Type 1 diabetes. The product uses a sensor inserted below the skin to measure blood glucose. Analysts said Abbott could have a competitive edge because the FDA did not advise patients to take samples of their blood to confirm the system's readings.

Abbott rose $1.51, or 2.9 percent, to $53.66. Dex-Com, which gets all its revenue from selling its own blood glucose monitoring system, plunged $22.70, or 33.6 percent, to $44.77 in heavy trading.

Benchmark U.S. crude gave up an early gain and fell 58 cents, or 1.1 percent, to $51.56 a barrel in New York. Brent crude, the standard for international oil prices, fell 49 cents to $57.41 per barrel in London.

Wholesale gasoline lost 2 cents to $1.63 a gallon.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ikea is making moves so you don't have to assemble a sofa or bookcase yourself.

The furniture seller said Thursday that it is buying online on-demand services platform TaskRabbit, which lets users hire people to help them move, clean up their house or assemble furniture. Much of Ikea's furniture requires customers to screw together table legs, bedframes and dining room chairs.

Ikea said it tested TaskRabbit in its stores in London last year and plans to roll out the service in U.S. stores and more U.K. locations. More countries may be added later. Before the TaskRabbit deal, certain Ikea stores already provided some independent work-

Mini Fact:

A little bov in Cambodia receives a vaccination against the measles. The measles virus is very contagious.

Have you ever wondered how we catch colds, flu and other diseases? A sore throat might be caused by bacteria or viruses. Diseases such as flu are caused by viruses. Illnesses such as food poisoning can be caused by bacteria such as E. coli (E KOH-lie) and salmonella (SAL-muh-NELL-uh).

Bacteria and viruses are some of the tiniest creatures on Earth. They are also some of the most powerful. They can wipe out armies or destroy crops. But bacteria also help keep everything on Earth alive.

As the school year gets underway, The Mini Page takes a look at the germs that can make us sick.

What are bacteria?

Bacteria are creatures made of just one cell. A cell is the smallest unit of life that can function on its own. Bacteria are so small that hundreds to thousands of them could fit on the period These Streptococcus at the end of this sentence.

bacteria (in gold) can cause strep throat.

The Mini Page® © 2017 Andrews McMeel Syndication Based on mater

Bacteria can grow in many different habitats, such as the soil, human bodies, animals and plants. They have even been found living in active volcanoes and at the bottom of the ocean. Experts believe bacteria may be some of the earliest forms of life.

Helpful and harmful

Without bacteria, life would not exist on Earth. They break apart dead matter and return the materials to the environment. Bacteria are necessary for our health. They live in our intestines and help us digest food so we can use the vitamins and minerals in it.

These bacteria do not normally cause illnesses. But if something throws our bodies off balance, such as not getting enough sleep or healthy food, the normal bacteria in our bodies can multiply and make us ill.

Bacteria can also enter the body from outside. They might get in through your mouth or nose, contaminated food or a cut.

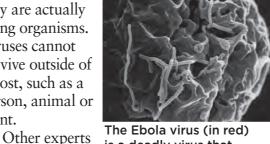

What are viruses?

Viruses are much more basic than even bacteria. They are so simple, some experts do not think they are actually living organisms. Viruses cannot survive outside of a host, such as a person, animal or plant.

form of life. From 10,000 to 1 million viruses could fit on a period.

Staying healthy

Have you ever gotten a shot to keep you from getting a disease such as measles or flu? A shot to prevent disease is called a vaccine (vak-SEEN).

Vaccines expose your body to small amounts of viruses or bacteria. The small doses of these germs cause the body to make its own defenses. Your body remembers the invading bacteria or viruses and how to defend against them. Then, if you ever get that virus or bacteria again, your body can produce defenses quickly. This can keep you free of the disease, or can help you to suffer a milder form.

Preventing illness

Experts say washing your hands is the most powerful strategy you can use against bacteria or viruses. It is important to wash your hands:

- before eating;
- before putting your hands into your mouth for any reason;
 - after sharing toys:
- after playing outside or touching an animal;
 - after going to the bathroom;
- after you've been with someone who
 - if you get a cut or scrape.

Production vs. Custom home construction

A Production Home involves the same house design used repeatedly. These are typically seen in neighborhoods that are built by large-volume homebuilders. These "tract" homes may appear in suburban locations outside more densely populated areas so larger tracts of land can be subdivided to support such construction.

All homes in the community may be built by just one Production home builder who owns all the lots. There are several large, national Production homebuilders with good reputations, as well as local or regional builders that can fall within this category.

A Custom home is one-of-akind, typically designed and built from scratch. This process involves collaboration among the homeowner, Custom builder, architect and other parties involved in the design and logistics. Usually, the home lot is a driving factor in the design and construction. Often the homeowner has found a lot for sale, but sometimes it's a builder lot. Custom builders tend to be associated with high quality work and are focused on a smaller local or regional market.

Somewhere in between is the Semi-Custom home — often where a customized home is built based on an existing set of house plans that were altered to meet the buyer's needs. But it is also a term used for some Production home builders who provide greater flexibility and a large set of options to customize the stock plans for the home buyer.

Production homes are generally built at a variety of price points, but offer enormous value and cost-savings for home buyers. There is a no-hassle benefit to these stock floor plans. There are typically several plan choices and options from which to choose, but without having to go through the stress and day-today decisions of building from scratch. Time is saved throughout the Production homebuilding process, allowing a buyer to move in relatively quickly.

Sometimes Production homes are referred to negatively as "cookie-cutter" homes. Due to the homogeneous nature of these house plans, many times there are few options when looking at finishing touches (like cabinets or flooring) or room configuration, and low flexibility once the course of a plan is set into action.

Custom homes offer two enormous benefits — choice and flexibility. These homes offer a homeowner a choice in almost everything in the homebuilding process — from the foundation to the flooring to the doorknobs. Custom-home builders are flexible in mixing styles and plans to construct a home that is molded to the owner's needs and lifestyle. Some argue that this custom attention leads to higher quality.

Of course, all this flexibility comes with a certain price time and cost. As either the home buyer or the homebuilder, you will be dealing with more decisions, more stress, more room for errors and possibly more setbacks than the average Production home.

HOW TO Flip houses Make movies Stay married

Corbin Bernsen and Amanda Pays talk about their new book, 'Open House'

BY CLINT O'CONNOR

Akron Beacon Journal (TNS)

The only thing harder than keeping a Hollywood marriage afloat may be navigating major home renovations with your spouse.

Corbin Bernsen and Amanda Pays have managed to do both for nearly 30 years.

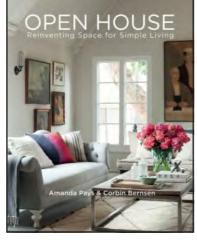

In addition to successful careers in film and television, the couple has been busy renovating more than 20 homes on the side -living in some, flipping others, and showing a knack for repurposing pipes, planks, glass and beams in an effort to be both frugal and decorative.

Their style and strategies are compiled into a new book, "Open House: Reinventing Space for Simple Living" (Gibbs Smith; $26.99).

"Open House" features a beautiful collection of photographs of their projects, homes often accented in whites and grays, and the story of their evolving saga of fixer-uppers. It was primarily written by Pays, who has a sharp eye for interior design and overhauls.

"It was really meant as a design book that also incorporated our lives." Bernsen said. "But people are reading it. I had never heard of people actually reading a coffee table book.'

He and Pays were on the phone from temporary digs in Los Angeles. Their four sons Oliver, Angus, Henry and Finley are mostly grown or off at college, so they have the flexibility of empty-nesters.

"We're gypsies right now, we're nomads," said Pays, her British accent still thick despite decades in America. "We don't actually have a place in the states right now. We are living out of suitcases and back and forth to our house in France. We've taken a year off to think about where we want to put down roots next."

"I was thinking more like two years," Bernsen said.

When they first connected in the late '80s, he was known as Arnie Becker on "L.A. Law," she was Theora Jones on "Max Headroom." After they met at a Los Angeles nightclub, Bernsen told a friend, "I'm going to marry that girl!"

Flush with cash from his TV success, Bernsen had just redone his Laurel Canyon house and overloaded it with "Santa Fe" touches. He was quite proud of his decorating. When he showed it off to Pays, she made a simple declaration: "All this has to go!"

Shades of things to come. They were married in 1988 and immediately started the pattern of moving in, fixing up and moving on. Their friend Steve Martin liked the couple's first house in Beverly Hills so much that he bought it, and everything in it.

"It was a compliment whenever people wanted to buy them lock, stock and barrel," Pays said. "But we always kept the really special things, about three or four pieces of furniture, that we've always managed to negotiate out of the deal.'

Their journey has taken them from abodes in Southern California, to a Georgian house in Surrey, England (which dated to the 1400s), and a farm in the south of France. They are kicking around an idea for a reality fixer-upper TV show called

"Flipping France." "Corbin and I have been doing this for 30 years. We reuse things and turn them into something else. We never tore a house down to bare studs. I always look at the hardware, and what lighting I can keep, and then adapt some pieces that are already there."

Bernsen has several projects in the works, including "Psych: The Movie," which airs in December, on USA Network (he played Henry Spencer for eight seasons on the series), and he and Pays are set to co-star in the feature film, "My Mistress.

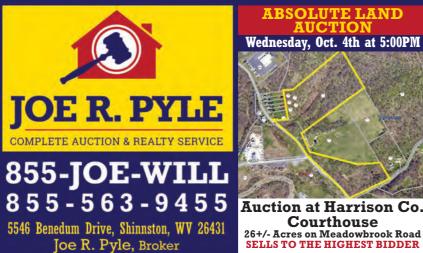

The couple will celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary next year, defying the odds in a culture where celebrity breakups are announced almost weekly.

'We've had our ups and downs like any relationship, but we're on this journey together, and always finding something new together always excites us," Pays said.

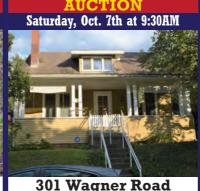

"We had this joke, 'Change houses, not spouses,' which someone ripped off and put a fake book on Amazon," Bernsen said.

'But there is something to that. It kind of keeps things fresh. When we get a project together, there are certainly arguments and disagreements, but in the end it comes together, and we have the new space that we live in. Each new house is like a holiday if you will. They last as long as the holiday lasts.

10 must-haves for your home in case of a disaster

BY CATHY HOBBS

Tribune News Service (TNS)

There are a number of items that are helpful to keep on hand in your home in case of emergency.

Being caught off guard in a natural disaster or sudden power or water outage may not only be inconvenient, it may also be devastating and costly. Being properly prepared for the what-ifs may be life-saving.

Here's a list of musthaves for the home.

1. Flashlight and batteries. Having properly working flashlights could play a critical and vital role in the case of a short-term or longterm power outage. Make sure you have heavy duty flashlights on hand.

2. Tarps come in different strengths and sizes and can be used for various applications. In the case of a storm, they can be used to secure items that may become airborne.

3. At least four jugs of water. In the case of a power outage, there will come a point when toilets will no longer be able to flush and water will drain from faucets. Having water on hand for these necessities will come in handy.

4. More than one source of communication. Have the ability to communicate and call for help in various ways. For example, be sure to have both a landline and cellphone in case one goes down. Back up your Wi-Fi connections. Also, consider purchasing a portable, battery-operated radio.

5. Generators. storm season in full swing. having a safety plan in place is appealing to many homeowners. Whether it is a standby or one that is portable, a generator can help you weather the storm with your power on.

6. Check your roof. When a storm comes, you will want to make sure your roof is in top condition. Roofs are one of the main sources of water entry into a home during a storm.

7. Consider installing a storm door. Storm doors aren't just decorative; they serve a vital function by helping to keep rain, wind and other elements from penetrating entry points to vour home.

8. If your windows aren't storm-ready, make sure they are by replacing them.

9. A chainsaw can be a vital piece of equipment af-

when it comes to cleanup. 10. Power tools. Nothing beats having a good set of tools in the home. This is a must any time of the year. Hammers, screwdrivers and drills are all part of having the basics.

Weathervanes were designed in many shapes

THE RECENT FLOODS in Houston and the hurricane in Florida show how important weather, rain and wind are to everyday life now and in the distant past.

Weathervanes told the direction of the wind and aided in forecasting the weather. The earliest known weathervane was used as early as 48 B.C., in Greece. It was in the shape of a god: Half man, half fish.

During the mid-1700s, makers created weathervanes in many shapes, including a Native American, banner, rooster and even a dove of peace for President Washington's home in Mount Vernon.

By the 1800s, weathervanes were featured on many roofs as decorations as well as useful additions. The Goddess Liberty and the American eagle were new designs celebrating the new country. But another favored design was a reminder of a popular sport, the race horse.

Today, collectors want the factory-made metal weathervanes of the past or the antique flat folk-art copies made from sheet metal. It took $18,150 to buy this Fiske & Co.

Julia auction. Like many weathervanes, it has a bullet hole made when someone used it for target practice. The weathervane honored a famous racehorse who raced from 1868-'75. She died in the middle of an important race. The racetrack built a statue of the horse, and the country remembered American Girl as a horse who tried her best in every race.

Q: When did Judith Leiber start making her jeweled purses? I have my mother's purse, which looks like a pile of books. Is it valuable?

A: Judith Leiber purses were first made in 1963. She sold the company and the name in 1993, but she continued designing until 2004. Her jeweled handbags in great condition sell for hundreds of dollars. The pile of books purse has sold for $700.

Q: I'm the fifth generation living on my farm, and I have the original government deed signed on Jan. 19. 1819, by James Monroe. It appears to be made of parchment and is in great condition with a raised stamp. I would like to know the average value of this item or have someone appraise it.

A: The document you have probably is a land grant, not a deed. The federal government issued land grants documenting the transfer of property from the United States to the new owner. A deed records subsequent changes in ownership. The president personally signed all land grants until 1833, when Congress passed a law allowing a special secretary to sign the president's name to land grants. Land grants signed by President Monroe sold at auction for $200 to over $300.

Q: About 20 years ago, my wife and I got a decorated set of dishes for eight, which were manufactured in England. We are at least the second generation to use them. The inscription on the gravy boat reads "Staffordshire Old Granite Made in England Johnson Bros. A Genuine Hand Engraving, All Decoration with the Glaze Detergent & Acid Resisting Colour, Gretchen." Are our dishes a worthwhile collectible?

A: Johnson Brothers was founded by Alfred and Frederick Johnson in Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire, England, in 1883. The company became part of the Waterford Wedgwood Group, in 1995. Production in England stopped in 2003. Johnson Brothers made Gretchen pattern dinnerware from 1974-'78. Gretchen Blue has blue flowers and leaves. Gretchen Green has red and yellow flowers and green leaves. Sets of dinnerware are hard to sell, but you might be able to sell some or all of it to a matching or replacement service. The retail price is about $45 for a five-piece place setting. You probably will have trouble selling the set for more than $200.

Hidden Hills home comes off the roster

BY NEAL J. LEITEREG

Los Angeles Times (TNS)

LOS ANGELES — Derek Fisher, a former Los Angeles Lakers point guard and fivetime NBA champion, sold his home in gated Hidden Hills for $5.95 million.

The traditional-style estate, built in 2007 and customized during Fisher's ownership, features such personal touches as Venetian plaster walls and hickory floors. Modern chandeliers create visual interest in the two-story foyer and living and dining rooms.

A wood-paneled den, executive office, screening room, six bedrooms and eight bathrooms also lie within more than 9,400 square feet of living space. An over-thetop kitchen large enough for a pickup game is equipped with two islands, marble countertops and warming and cooling drawers. An elevator services both floors.

French doors open to a flagstone patio that surrounds the swimming pool and spa. A guesthouse, outdoor fireplace, lawns and formal landscaping fill out the backyard. Elsewhere on the acre-plus property is a two-stall barn.

Fisher, 43, paired with Kobe Bryant in the Lakers backcourt on multiple championship teams coached by Phil Jackson. After retiring in 2014, Fisher reunited with Jackson, then the president of the Knicks, when he was named head coach of the New York franchise.

Fisher was let go from his position last year.

He bought the house in 2009 for $5.5 million, the Los Angeles Times previously reported.

Set a course for the Valley

Jonathan Frakes is seeking out new life and civilizations in the San Fernando Valley.

The "Star Trek: The Next Generation" actor and his wife, soap star Genie Francis, bought a home in a gated Woodland Hills community for about $2.78 million.

Mediterranean-The style house, built in 1988, sits on more than a third of an acre with a swimming pool, lush landscaping and a gazebo.

The rock-finished twostory has more than 8,900 square feet of living space that includes a formal entry with a curving staircase, formal living and dining rooms, a paneled den, an eat-in kitchen, six bedrooms and eight bathrooms. The family room features a sunken wet bar and walls of windows that take in the grounds.

The master suite boasts a dry sauna and one of three fireplaces. French doors off the master bedroom open to a balcony overlooking the backyard.

Frakes, 65, gained fame for his portrayal of Commander William Riker in the "Star Trek" films and the television series "Star Trek: The Next Generation." More recently, he has lent his voice to the animated series "Guardians of the Galaxy.'

Francis, 55, is known for her role as Laura Spencer on the daytime soap opera "General Hospital."

Among her other credits are "The Young and the Restless," "Murder She Wrote" and "Pretty."

Pasadena loses an anchor spot

Less than a month after putting her Pasadena home on the market, "Entertainment Tonight" co-anchor Nancy O'Dell sold it for $7.05 million. The asking price was $7.189 million.

grounds, the handsome Mediterranean Revival was designed and built in 1931 by architect Wallace Neff. Features include hardwood and Spanish-tile floors, vaulted and beamed ceilings and three fireplaces. French doors and woodframed windows take in the landscaped grounds.

Within the 8,926 square feet of living space are a formal entry and living and dining rooms, a great room and an executive office. A lower level holds a barroom, theater and wine cellar. There are six bedrooms and 6.5 bathrooms.

A tiled fountain sits in the heart of an interior courtyard, which opens to a loggia with an outdoor fireplace and dining area. Elsewhere on the property are a swimming pool and a guesthouse.

O'Dell, 51, joined "Entertainment Tonight" in 2011 after more than a decade with the news show "Access Hollywood." She has covered such entertainment events as the Academy Awards, the Emmys, the Golden Globes and the Grammys.

An encore at L.A. Live

Television host Mary Hart and her husband, producer Burt Sugarman, put their condominium at the Ritz-Carlton Residences at L.A. Live back on the market at $7.9 million.

three-bedroom. The 3.5-bathroom residence, which the couple renovated and customized, had been listed earlier this year for as much as $8.8 million.

Within the 4,170 square feet of interior space are an open living and dining room area, an office and a center-island kitchen. Flatscreen televisions fill the back wall of the den/media room. Floor-to-ceiling windows in every room take in city and ocean views.

The master suite, reached by automatic sliding doors, is equipped with his and hers wardrobes and electronic blackout shades. A whirlpool tub in the master bath is also automated.

Two covered parking spaces are included with the unit. Building amenities include access to a rooftop swimming pool and fitness center as well as concierge, security and valet services.

Hart, 66, hosted "Entertainment Tonight" from 1982-2011.

Sugarman, 78, is known for producing game shows such as "Celebrity Sweep-"The Wizard of stakes.' Odds" and "The Newlywed Game." Among his film credits are "Kiss Me Goodbye" (1982), "Extremities" (1986) and the Oscar-nominated drama "Children of a Lesser God" (1986).

The hits just keep on comin'

Comedian and talk radio host Tim Conway Jr. listed his Burbank home for $839,000 and in less than a week had offers in hand.

Last year, the radio personality for L.A.'s KFI-AM sold another home in Tarzana for over the asking price in just under a month.

The house he's selling sits on a tree-lined street in the Magnolia Park area. Conway bought the 1,255square-foot house five years ago and completely renovated it last year, according to listing agent Jason Insalaco, of Kelton Properties.

Updates include a new solar array, drought-resistant landscaping and Enviroblind shade screens. The kitchen features a tiled backsplash and new cabinetry. Light hardwood floors line the living areas.

The master suite has a walk-in closet, cathedral ceilings and a sliding door that opens to the backyard. There are three bedrooms and two bathrooms in all.

Hedges surround a detached garage in the rear. The driveway leading to the garage is gated.

Conway, a Los Angeles native, is the son of Tim Conway, the actor and comedian of "The Carol Burnett Show" fame. He hosts "The Tim Conway Jr. Show" weeknights on KFI-AM. Before joining KFI, Conway cohosted an evening talk radio show at KLSX-FM for more than a decade.

9 space-saving ideas for a small kitchen

greatist.com (TNS)

Living in a city and loving to cook can be a challenge, especially since most kitchens are tiny and have limited storage space. How are you supposed to use your oven when it's doubling as a shoe rack?! But seriously, city folks (or anyone who's living with a tight kitchen) must get creative with their space, and these small kitchen ideas will help ease the pain of spending top dollar for a kitchen that is smaller than a suburban bathroom.

1. DON'T HANG ART-WORK: YOU NEED THE WALL SPACE

Small kitchens mean limited cabinet space, but they all have walls. Instead of covering them with art, use that prime kitchen real estate for something more functional. Install a magnetic knife holder on the wall to free up valuable cabinet space, suggests Lindsey Pine, M.S., RDN. "They're relatively inexpensive, save a ton of space, and are a great way to display your chef blades."

Another fun trick, courtesy of culinary nutritionist Julie Harrington, R.D., is to hang a mason jar display on the wall to stash cooking utensils. "To create one yourself, stain a piece of wood, drill a few hose clamps into the wood, and attach the mason jars," she says. Or if you're like us and left your tool belt and enthusiasm for crafting in the suburbs, pick up one on Amazon.

We're replacing our artwork with this: Mason Jar Caddy; $62.

2. DO AN INVENTORY COUNT OF PANTRY STA-PLES SO YOU DON'T OVERBUY

The thought of buying in bulk is laughable for those with minimal kitchen space. Even purchasing an item you already have can cause major space anxiety (buying a third rice wine vinegar is the worst). To avoid overbuying, keep track of the items in your kitchen. "Transfer everything into clear plastic containers so you can clearly see what you have and make the most of the limited space," says Chelsey Amer, M.S., RDN, CDN. Anytime you run out of something, make a note on your phone. Next time you're at the store, you will know exactly what you need.

What we're storing in our cabinets: Set of Narrow Stackable Canisters; $44.93. 3. CLEAR THE CLUT-TER ON THE COUNTER

Ask any city dweller who likes to cook if they would rather have counter space or a doorman, and the answer will almost always be counter space. Cluttering that precious counter space with bulky appliances is a tiny kitchen no-no. Rather than buying humongous blenders and fancy coffee makers, choose smaller and storable options, like an immersion blender or a French press. Both still do the trick and are light enough to be stored on a homemade shelf, or shoved into a drawer.

What we're squeezing onto our tiny shelf: Le Creuset French Press; $67.99.

4. THE STOVE ISN'T JUST FOR COOKING

In a small kitchen, everything should serve a dual purpose, and the oven is no exception. Pine suggests storing cast-iron pans in the oven. "Take them out when you need to use the oven, but since they can take the heat, you don't need to wait for the oven to completely cool down before returning them to their resting spot.' Also, that weird little drawer under the oven is a great place to store pots, pans and baking sheets.

What we're storing in our ovens: Victoria 12-inch Cast-Iron Pan; $24.99.

5. GET TO THOSE THE HARD-TO-REACH CABI-NETS WITH SOME HELP

Contrary to popular belief, a step stool is not just for kids. You know those cabinets over the fridge or the small space between the cabinets and the ceiling? Those are both valuable real estate in the kitchen, but completely out of sight and reach for most people. A step stool helps you utilize that space, and some can easily be folded up and stored under your bed. What we're stepping on: Serena & Lily Teak Step Stool: $69.

6. BYE. UNNECESSARY

My mom was a great home cook, and she didn't have an Instant Pot, spiralizer, ice cream maker or an indoor grill — gasp! Somehow, she delivered a home-cooked meal every night with three things — a good knife, a cutting board and a great skillet. To clear up space, survey your kitchen gadgets and ask yourself if you've used them in the past six months. If the answer is no, then it may be time to find them a better home. The one exception to this rule is the Crock-Pot — never throw away a slow cooker! You can make so many easy Crock-Pot recipes with stuff in the basin too). What we're never getting rid of: Hamilton Beach Set 'N Forget Crock-Pot; $49.49.

7. SHELVES SERVE A FUNCTIONAL (AND FUN) PURPOSE FOR YOUR WALLS

Let's do the math. A whole set of dishware plus pots and pans plus wine bottles and wine glasses divided by two cabinets equals a whole bunch of kitchen stuff that ends up in your closet. If you don't have the cabinet space to store all of your beloved kitchenware, make it. The walls are great places for shelves, where you can store your dishes and bowls, and all of your wine necessities. It might even incentivize vou to have prettier dishware (Anthropologie, anyone?) since it's out on display.

What we're hanging on our walls: Vignetto Shelf;

8. TWO-TIER THE SIL-VERWARE STORAGE

When you only have one drawer to spare for all of vour silverware, your forks and spoons end up in the same slot. Not only does it look like your college kitchen, but you also constantly grab the spoon when you need the fork, and you're so frustrated that you're considering buying sporks. Don't do that. Try a double-tiered silverware organizer so you can have two drawers in one. Now you have room for forks, knives, spoons, chopsticks, veggie peeler and sporks if you want 'em.

How we're organizing

SPACE THAN YOU THINK

Sometimes the simplest things can make a complete mess, like extra plastic bags. Rather than shoving a mound of plastic bags into the back of a cabinet, Harrington suggests transforming an empty tissue box into a plastic bag holder. "It's a handy and compact solution." And if you're not into the whole DIY scene, you can buy a plastic bag holder that easily hide inside of a cabinet.

What we're storing our plastic bags in: Stainless Steel Bag Holder; $14.99.

From first contact to closing, our expert team is committed to making

YOUR HOME, OUR MISSION!

Durango Offers Differences

Unusual Mixture Contrasts with Popular Cookie-Cutter Crossovers

By Derek Price CARGAZING.COM

you want to find another vehicle like the Dodge Durango, good luck. Yes, it's a three-row SUV, but it's nothing like, say, the Ford Explorer or Honda Pilot. That's like assuming, because they both have two legs, that an ostrich is the same as Jennifer Lawrence.

Drive one. You'll see. The Durango has carved out a niche that no other vehicle occupies, perhaps for a good reason: it's a weird mixture of half truck, half muscle car. Nobody else builds a vehicle quite like this one.

On the one hand, with V8 power available, it can do some of the same jobs as big, traditional SUVs such as the Chevy Tahoe. It can tow 6,200 pounds and has seats that fold down to leave cavernous space on moving day.

On the other, it rides relatively low to the ground and handles more like a sports car than a truck

With rear-wheel drive and a suspension that keeps body roll in check, it can change direction faster than a politician after election day. That makes it more fun to push hard than any other big SUV, unless you want to spend crazy money on something with a Mercedes, BMW or Porsche badge.

PHOTOS COURTESY OF DODGE DURANGO

The Durango has a snarling nose that emphasizes its sinister side. With a HEMI V8 engine and sporty suspension tuning available, it's in a muscle-SUV class by itself.

The question, then, is how long an outlier vehicle like the Durango can exist when the mass market has moved

There's no question that mainstream buyers today are flocking to fuelefficient, car-like crossovers that sort of look like SUVs, albeit ones with gutless engines and indistinct, cookie-cutter styling. Those are the vehicles that are hardest for me to write about because they're so darn similar, like I'm reviewing flavors for Vanilla Magazine.

The Durango presents a different challenge. How do you review watermelon chocolate? Well, if you like watermelon and you like chocolate, you'll probably enjoy watermelon

If you like trucks and you like muscle cars, you'll probably enjoy the Durango.

Personally, I relish that mixture because it's so unusual. It has its drawbacks, starting with city gas mileage ratings of 19 mpg with the base V6 and 14 with the V8, but the benefits are plentiful. The Durango is a do-itall vehicle that can haul your kids, low your toys and make you sn on weekend drives, complete with a throaty roar and tire smoke if you're so inclined.

It even looks the part, with a sleek, wagon-like profile and front grille that goes beyond aggressive. It's almost murderous.

Even Dodge's lineup changes this year bring out its homicidal side. The Durango GT supplants the Limited trim as the new volume model, with a monochrome, sinister, car noir look. A new appearance package on the upscale Citadel models adds - I'm not kidding — "anodized gunmetal" trim on the steering wheel and speakers.

The Brass Monkey package is back this year, too, something I hope they'll consider renaming Brass Knuckles.

The black leather interior in my Durango R/T tester added to my badguy impressions, but not all Durangos are so stark. Some are downright warm and cozy, a testament to the Dodge interior design team's creativity.

Pricing starts at $29,995 for the SXT trim with rear-wheel drive. You can tack on an additional $2,600 to get all-wheel drive if you need it.

Topping the lineup is the R/T model starting at $44,695. Fancy options pushed the price of my tester up to $51,560, including some that surprised me: a nicely sorted adaptive cruise control system and a Blu-Ray player in the back seat.

Where do I put the money?

Dear Dave, I have a savings account for my 2-year old that has $5,000 in it, and about half of that is in gold. I'm going to save for his college separately, and give this to him to help start his life after school. Is there a better place to put this other than a traditional savings ac-

If you take a look at the lifelong track record on gold, it will scare you to death.

count? — Laura Dear

Laura, First of all, vou should not invest in gold. Gold is a very volatile, very dangerous investment. I don't have a dime invested in gold, and I would strongly suggest that you not invest in it, either. If you take a look at the life-long track record on gold, it will scare you to death.

For the time being, you can leave it all in a traditional savings account. But if he's not going to use it for many, many years, you could move it into a conservative mutual fund. In fact, you started when he was at such young age, a nice, conservative mutual fund might be a really good idea.

When he gets a little older, he can start adding to it himself from the money he makes from odd jobs and chores and such. After 15 years or so, thanks to your foresight and his contributions, he'll probably wind up with a pretty nice chunk of cash.

Good job, mom!

Debt snowball reasoning

Dear Dave, Why do you recommend paying off debts from smallest to largest when doing the debt snowball?

- Michael

Dear Michael, Lots of people think paying off the debt with the highest interest rate first is the best approach. This seems to make sense mathematically, but I realized a long time ago that if those people could do math, they wouldn't be drowning in debt.

Debt is not a mathematical problem, it's a behavior problem. Personal finance is 80 percent behavior, and only 20 percent head knowledge.

The reason the debt snowball pays off debt from smallest to largest even though it may be mathematically incorrect – is that modifying your behavior and inspiring you to get out of debt is more important than the math. Your probability of becoming wealthy has a lot more to do with your behavior than any sort of financial sophistication or academic degree.

When you pay off a small debt, you experience success, and that gives you hope. Then, you move on the next largest debt. When you pay that one off — and you've wiped out two debts — it energizes you. At that point, you really start to believe in yourself and the fact that you're on the road to becoming debt-free!

Website: lemonadenailbar.com Facebook: Lemonade Nail Bar

Lemonade Nail Bar (LNB) is a modern nail bar and boutique that focuses on providing stylish nail and beauty treatments in a clean and chic atmosphere. LNB was born out of a frustration with the typical nail salon experience.

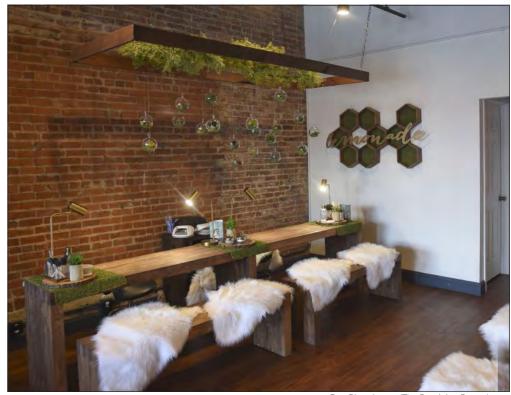

What's new: Our latest services are our Build Me Up Mani and Pedi, designed to give our clients exactly the service that they want, at a price that is right for them, as well as our set of the week, a stunning set of acrylic or gel nails with themed designs and accents selected on a weekly basis.

What makes the business special: At Lemonade, we focus on giving our customers the best and cleanest nail salon experience we possibly can. We never reuse files or buffers, always run all of our tools through a medical-grade autoclave and never use jets in our services.

Interesting facts: We at Lemonade believe in giving back to the community that has given us so much, so $1 of every service provided goes to a charity in need. We are currently partnered with the American Cancer Society for our first year, donating to the fight against breast cancer.

Meeting with economists, blue-collar workers, Fed chair talks of economic uncertainty

Assiciated Press

CLEVELAND — In a speech last week marked by large doses of both statistics and humility, Federal Reserve Chairwoman Janet Yellen said that the economic outlook is highly uncertain, suggesting that the central bank will proceed slowly in raising interest rates and scaling back easymoney policies.

The Fed has been moving to reduce monetary support for the economy based on an assessment that the labor market is strengthening and that inflation, which has been unusually low, will soon stabilize.

Recently, the Fed announced it would begin unwinding the massive bondbuying effort it began after the financial crisis of 2007-'08 and signaled that another interest rate hike, after two small increases this year, would come by December's end. Policymakers foresee three rate hikes for next year.

But Yellen suggested that the future policy course was uncertain. "My colleagues and I may have misjudged the strength of the labor market," she said at a conference of the National Association for Business Economics. She said the same about "the degree to which longer-run inflation expectations are consistent with our inflation objective, or even the fundamental forces driving inflation."

Inflation has been running persistently below the Fed's 2 percent target, puzzling economists and causing policymakers to be hesitant in raising rates. Yellen said that she still expected inflation to move up to the Fed's desired goal in coming months, but she noted that the labor market, which historically has been closely linked to inflation, may not be as tight as the low unemployment rate suggests.

In the last five months, the nation's jobless figure vacillated between 4.3 percent and 4.4 percent, a level most Fed officials see as essentially full employment, in which almost everyone capable and willing to work has a job.

Yet even as more employers have been reporting trouble finding workers, there's been little indication of a pickup in wage increases, which on average have remained modest, rising at an annual pace of about 2.5 percent.

Because of demographic other structural changes, Yellen said, "the unemployment rate that is sustainable today may be lower than the rate that was sustainable in the past.'

The low rate of wage increases could indicate that the labor market has more slack than economists had believed something at which Yellen got a close-up, nonstatistical look later in the day.

After addressing the gathering of largely professional economists. Yellen went to a manufacturing job-training center at Cuyahoga Community College in the more gritty eastern part of the city.

Yellen has periodically visited such sites during her term as Fed chief, having done so in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, publicizing her interest in the real-life world of workers but also as a reality check on economic theories and data.

Among the people she met at Cuyahoga was student Jessica Dicus. Dicus, 37, said she has for the last 10 years, as a stay-at-home mom raising her three children. But with her kids now in school and the labor market looking better, Dicus recently signed up for an eight-week manufacturing program at the school.

been out of the labor force

She is halfway through the training, which set her back about $4,200. Once her classes are complete, Dicus said, she expects to land a job as a machine operator at Swagelok, a private maker of tubes, fittings and other parts used in a variety of industries.

In a round-table discussion with students, instructors and community leaders, Dicus told Yellen that she would like to see more apprenticeship programs like those at Cuyahoga, so that when her children come of age, they would have something waiting for them if they did not go to college. Yellen nodded.

The Fed, of course, doesn't run apprenticeship or other job programs, but the central bank's mandate is to maintain stable prices and maximize employment. The Great Recession wiped out millions of jobs, and many people who were pushed out have not returned to the labor market.

The labor-force participation rate in places such as Cleveland is particularly low, and over the years, Yellen has advocated holding down interest rates to support economic growth and help more people reenter the job market. But just how many can, or will, return to work remains a big question.

Job developers and community leaders at Cuyahoga spoke about an array of economic and social barriers, including the opioid drug problem, population decline and most acutely the lack of worker skills, which hampers many employers who want to hire.

Yellen, in her speech, said that the subdued wage growth probably reflects the sluggish productivity in recent years, but she also said that some employers have responded to the difficulty in finding qualified workers by expanding training and offering signing bonuses — "possible harbingers of stronger wage gains to come."

Planning for surgery guilt free at work

Q: I need to schedule some orthopedic surgery and want to make it as undisruptive as possible for my co-workers. It's not an emergency, so I do have some latitude on the timing. What steps do you suggest?

—Janelle, 52 director of benefits

A: Obviously always put your health first, and then work with others to set up a solid plan.

First of all, what's the time frame for surgery? How far out is the latest date you would want to have it? What is the post-surgery process? Think about the amount of time you will be unable to work at all, as well as limits on mobility that could affect your ability to do your job.

Once you know that, look at your work calendar to determine when known peaks or lulls may occur. For example, you may be involved in your company's open enrollment period, so you would want to work around that if you can.

As your next step, think through a detailed plan. List all of the work items that will need to be delegated, the communications that will need to go out and the unpredictable events that tend to occur during your workdays.

Then have proposed solutions for all of these needs. This includes items that you can do in advance and have ready when needed. Also consider ways that this can be developmental for team members, not just more work.

Or if you are a one-person team, identify ideas that can spread some of the work across to your peers.

At this point, bring your boss into the conversation. Let them know the situation, and lay out your view of the needs that will be created by your absence, as well as the solutions you suggest. Every boss appreciates a team member who offers solutions and not just problems. Then work together to put together a fleshed out plan for covering during your absence.

Now it's time to share your news with your coworkers at whatever level you're comfortable with.

Then, depending on the plan you work out, you or your boss can discuss the work plan with your colleagues.

Build in enough time to brief individuals on their particular work items.

If someone is going to be a contact point for someone else, make an email introduction to smooth the way.

Recall all of the hiccups that you have experienced when someone is out unexpectedly, and mitigate them through your plan.

We all know that the best-laid plans will fall short. So, what if something changes? You need to be out longer, you need to go out sooner, etc.? The transition steps you have put in place will help ease the pain of that. You are building trust on the team through your preparations, and that will help them ride out extra disruption.

And in all of this, put taking care of yourself first. Despite how we may feel sometimes — or want to feel — we are not indispensable at work.

But our health is irreplaceable. So don't rush your return to work. You will need rest and rehab, so make a priority of investing in your healing.

Different ways to zap your debt

AMERICAN CONSUMER DEBT HAS REBOUNDED to prerecession levels, and the category that includes credit cards hit a record $1.02 trillion this summer. Maybe your credit card debt has crept up too, setting your own personal record.

It makes sense to pay particular attention to your credit cards, because their interest rates are typically higher than other types of debt, like student loans or a mortgage. Carrying balances on this more costly debt may derail goals such as building a retirement fund.

If your other types of debt are manageable, but your credit cards feel out of hand, you need to assess your situation first. Then you can choose a way to handle that debt, whether it's a self-guided payoff strategy or some type of debt relief, perhaps even bankruptcy.

■ Making a list of your credit card balances. Note the interest rate and minimum payment for each.

■ Comparing that debt to your income. Add up your total credit card debt and divide it by your annual income. For example, if you owe $5,000 on your cards and make $50,000 a year, your credit card debt is 10 percent of your income.

■ Determining what you can pay monthly. See if you can pay extra on top of your minimums.

The path you pick from here depends on your debt level and whether you can pay more than minimums.

When to try DIY

If your credit card debt is under 15 percent of your income and you can pay more than minimums, take a do-it-yourself approach.

Two common methods are "debt avalanche" and "debt snowball." Here's how they work.

■ Avalanche: Arrange debts by interest rate and pay off in order from highest to lowest. Keeping your focus on the most-expensive debt saves on interest.

■ Snowball: Arrange debts by balance and pay them off from smallest to largest. This can give you some quick victories to build momentum toward tackling bigger debts later.

With either method, pour all your extra payment money into the debt you're focusing on and pay the minimums required on the others.

After wiping out the first debt, stack what you had been paying toward it on top of the minimum for debt No. 2 and keep going. You'll end up plowing an ever-larger payment toward your targeted debt, speeding up progress.

Considering debt relief

Debt relief — getting a lower interest rate or a reduction in what you owe — can make bigger debt loads more manageable. You may need it if you're having difficulty paying the minimums or your credit card debt has exceeded 15 percent of your income.

Pick from three common options:

■ Debt consolidation. Several debts are rolled into one at a lower interest rate, often by getting a loan or using a balance transfer credit card.

■ Debt management plan. You work with a nonprofit credit counseling agency to set up a structured repayment plan over three to five years in return for lower interest rates.

■ Debt settlement. Typically, a debt settlement company diverts your payments to an escrow account. As late payments mount, your creditors may agree to accept less than the amount owed.

But damage to your credit is substantial, and exploring bankruptcy may make more sense.

When bankruptcy's best

A credit card debt of over 50 percent of your income can be impossible to pay back, even with extreme budget cuts. Struggling under so much debt can endanger basic financial needs such as saving even a little for retirement.

Resolving debt through bankruptcy can provide a clean financial slate. The filing will stay on your credit report for seven to 10 years, depending on whether you file Chapter 7 or Chapter 13.

But your credit score could rebound more than 80 points within six months of filing, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Tip: Bankruptcy can be one of the least expensive and fastest ways to resolve overwhelming debt.

Working holidays doesn't mean premium pay

DEAR CARRIE, My daughter recently got a job in a department store through a temporary employment agency. She worked Labor Day, yet was told she wasn't entitled to time-and-a-half for working the holiday. Can that be true?

— No Holiday Payoff
DEAR NO HOLIDAY: It is probably true because companies aren't required to offer employees premium pay when they work holidays or even weekends, unless an employment or union contract calls for the extra pay.

But many companies offer special pay for holidays to entice employees to work them. And they must offer premium pay when hourly employees work more than 40 hours a week. Those extra hours must be paid at one and one-half times employees' regular hourly rate.

DEAR CARRIE: My question concerns accumulated sick time. I work at a local university and belong to a union. We are allowed 20 sick days annually.

be carried over. In my 15 years of working here, I accumulated about 90 sick days. I was under the assumption that when you left the university, you were paid for these days — or at least half of them. But I was informed recently that that is no longer the case. I hate to waste these days, as I am planning to retire within two years. Is there a way to possibly be grandfathered in?

— No Carryover
DEAR NO CARRYOVER: What paid time off you can or cannot carry over is most likely a contractual issue since you belong to a union. So you need to consult your contract or a union representative. Paid time off, like premium pay for working holidays, isn't mandated.

Bear in mind that it's not uncommon for companies' handbooks to state that once employees leave for whatever reason, they forfeit all unused paid time off. You need to find out what your union contract or the university's handbook says about that.

DEAR CARRIE: I work as a security guard. My employer placed me at a nursing home. When there. I would often have to wait to be relieved, sometimes for 15 minutes, sometimes more. I would record all the time I worked on timesheets and even photographed them before I turned them in. When I asked my manager about this, his response was that payroll didn't like dealing with fractions of an hour. So when the extra time I worked totaled less than a half-hour, it disappeared because the company rounded down to the nearest hour. To even things out, the company said that when we worked more than 30 minutes extra, but less than an hour at the end of the day, the time was rounded up to the hour.

That sounded good, but the company didn't always follow through, and my pay sometimes came up short. What is the labor law regarding this?

— Round About DEAR ROUND: Labor law is clear on this issue. Whatever rounding practice is used, hourly employees must be paid for all the time they work.

Here is an example from the Department of Labor's Fact Sheet No. 53:

"An intermediate care facility docks employees by a full quarter hour (15 minutes) when they start work more than seven minutes after the start of their scheduled shift. Does this practice comply with the FLSA requirements? Yes, as long as the employees time is rounded up a full quarter hour when the employee starts working from 8 to 14 minutes before their shift or if the employee works from 8 to 14 minutes beyond the scheduled end of their shift."

FAA urged to roll back safety rules

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An influential industry committee recommended Thursday that the Federal Aviation Administration eliminate or scale back dozens of safety rules, including one on airline pilot qualifications.

The FAA's Aviation Rulemaking Advisory Committee said the recommendations are a response to an effort by the agency to comply with President Donald Trump's directives to cut government regulations. The committee approved a report containing the recommendations by a vote of 14 to 4 with one abstention.

Pilots unions and safety groups oppose the recommendation on pilot qualifications, saying it would undermine safety. Regional airlines have been trying to roll back the qualifications rule since it was adopted by the FAA in response to an aviation safety law passed by Congress after the last fatal crash of a U.S. passenger airliner.

Lawmakers said at the time that they were concerned about reports in the wake of the crash of Colgan Flight 3407 in February 2009, near Buffalo, N.Y., that some rapidly growing regional airlines were hiring first officers with far less experience than pilots at major airlines.

After the crash, lawmakers increased the minimum number of flight hours first officers must have in order to obtain a license to fly commercial passenger airliners to 1,500 hours, the same as captains, leading to more experienced first officers.

Before that, airlines were allowed to hire first officers with as few as 250 hours of flying experience. Some airlines would move first officers into a captain's seat as soon as they had the minimum 1,500 hours of flying experience.

The report recommends permitting pilots with less than 1,500 hours to qualify for an "air transport" license if they receive academic training from their airline.

Airlines say the current rule is acerbating a pilot shortage that has caused some regional carriers to cancel flights. The problem, they say, is that it can cost prospective pilots as much as they might pay for a four-year college education to acquire the greater flying hours they now need to qualify for an air transport license. As a result, fewer people are willing to pursue careers as pilots.

Faye Malarkey Black, president of the regional airline association, said the proposed changes would incorporate more meaningful education into pilot training than mere flight hours.

"Far from weakening safety, it's one of the most important things we can do right now to advance pilot training," she said.

Airline pilot unions and safety advocates say the problem is regional airlines don't pay high enough entrylevel salaries to attract as many pilots as they need.

"UPS and FedEx have good pay and benefits and thousands of highly qualified pilot applicants," the National Air Disaster Foundation, a safety advocacy group, said in a dissenting opinion to the committee's report. "There is only a pilot shortage of pilots able to work for $25,000 a year."

The Air Line Pilots Association International also opposed opposes the change, saying in its dissenting opinion that the pilot supply in the United States remains strong. Chad Balentine, an ALPA representative and member of the committee, said reducing the required entrylevel flight hours would "jeopardize safety."

The report also recommends 53 other changes to safety rules, include regulations governing the strength of hinges, emergency exit markings and whether ashtrays should be required in restrooms since smoking isn't allowed on planes.

Prime-time politics: Rapper runs for office and wins in ABC's 'The Mayor'

By Kyla Brewer

TV Media

Political comedy has always had its place in prime time, but one new ABC sitcom is putting an optimistic spin on the genre by looking at what happens when an unlikely but hopeful candidate ends up in a position of power.

Desperate to promote his music, 20something aspiring rapper Courtney Rose (Brandon Micheal Hall, "Search Party") decides to run for office in the small California town of Fort Grey in "The Mayor," premiering Tuesday, Oct. 3, on ABC. No one is more surprised than he is when he actually wins the election, making for one of the biggest political upsets in the area's history.

What began as a publicity stunt results in a massive opportunity, and he recognizes that he now has the potential to make a big difference in the lives of his fellow citizens. Suddenly, he understands that he has the power to do something about the very things he's been rapping about. Under the guidance of his supportive mama, Dina Rose (Yvette Nicole Brown, "Community"), he accepts the position and gets to work.

In a promo for the series, Hall explained his character's motivation: "He has a passion for music, but he also has an understanding that something needs to be changed within his community," he said.

Luckily, he has some help as he struggles to make the real changes necessary to improve the lives of Fort Grey's citizens. Along with his mother, who keeps a close watch on him and his administration, he's coached by Valentina Barella (Lea Michele, "Glee"), former campaign manager for his rival, Ed Gunt (David Spade, "Saturday Night Live"). She offers to serve as Rose's chief of staff when she realizes he truly wants to have a positive impact, but she'll accept nothing less than his very best.

Jermaine Leforge (Bernard David Jones, "Meet the Browns") and T.K. Carter (newcomer Marcel Spears). Leforge is a smooth operator and Carter is a sensitive sweetheart, but both of Rose's buddies have his back as he sets out to make the town the best it can be.

As he transitions from making music in his junk-filled bedroom closet to making major changes in the mayor's office, he discovers he's actually really good at his new job. It turns out that the same outspoken optimism and charisma that got him elected in the first place help him break through red tape and change the world, or at least the town, even though he's never actually had a full-time job before.

While it may seem like a goofy premise to staunch political satirists, "The Mayor" shows promise as a series that could inspire others to do good in their neighborhoods as the rookie mayor pushes for positive change despite his lack of experience in politics. Created by Emmy nominee Jeremy Bronson ("The Mindy Project"), the series has had industry pundits buzzing since it was announced in January.

According to Bronson, the show was inspired by Chance the Rapper and Broadway actor Daveed Diggs, who won both a Grammy and Tony for his role as Marquis de Lafayette/Thomas Jefferson in the hit musical "Hamilton." Diggs serves as an executive producer for "The Mayor" and also writes original music for the show, including some of the raps, which are performed by Hall. No plans have been announced for Diggs to appear on screen in the series.

Shortly after news of the pilot deal broke, Hall was cast in the lead role. While he'll be a fresh face to many

Yvette Nicole

The Mayor

Brown stars in TV viewers, he has an impressive resume. Since graduating from The Juilliard School, he's appeared in such series as "Unforgettable," "Broad City" and "Search Party," and will be seen on the big screen in the upcoming thriller "Monster Party."

Within a month of Hall's casting,
"Glee" fans cheered for Michele, who'd been cast as his co-star, playing the same kind of ambitious female that endeared her to millions during her time in Fox's musical series "Glee."
Her character in "The Mayor" helps Rose make his unconventional ideas a reality, thanks to her straitlaced style and extensive knowledge of the municipal political system.

When Yvette Nicole Brown joined the cast as Rose's mother, the news sent her fans into a frenzy, as she was still a cast member in CBS's "The Odd Couple" revival, which has since been cancelled. It's interesting to note that Brown had been cast in "The Odd Couple" while still tied to NBC's quirky cult comedy hit "Community." The popular actress has made a big impression on "The Mayor's" producers — Diggs has praised her as the "heart of the show."

"SNL" alum David Spade will continue his role as Gunt in a recurring capacity throughout the season.

The talented cast, experienced writing staff and even a Broadway star give serious weight to the lighthearted political comedy in the vein of such classic series as "Spin City" and "Benson," and HBO's current hit "Veep." Watch as rapper Rose struggles to overcome his inexperience and rise to the occasion to help his community in the premiere of "The Mayor," airing Tuesday, Oct. 3, on ABC.

MLB postseason begins with wild card games

By Ryan Guebert

TV Media

Every team is in action Sunday, Oct. 1, when the 2017 Major Leauge Baseball regular season comes to an end. Most games will have no impact on the postseason, but there could be some final wild card spots up for grabs, as was the case last year when the St. Louis Cardinals missed out on the postseason by one game as the San Francisco Giants were able to win the final game of the regular season. The 2017 MLB postseason begins with wild card action taking place Tuesday, Oct. 3, on ESPN, and Wednesday, Oct. 4, on TBS.

The Washington Nationals were first to secure a spot in the postseason when they clinched the National League East following a win over the Philadelphia Phillies and a Miami Marlins loss to the Atlanta Braves on Sept. 10. This makes it the team's fourth divisional title and postseason appearance since 2012.

Fittingly, 2012 was the breakout year for all-star outfielder Bryce Harper, who took home the National League Rookie-of-the-Year award. He managed to lead the Nationals to the postseason for the first time in Washington, and the first time as a franchise since 1981 in Montreal as the Expos.

On Aug. 12, Harper suffered a bone bruise injury to his left knee that would land him on the disabled list for a significant period of time. The silver lining was that the injury occurred early enough for him to possibly be ready for the postseason. There is speculation surrounding his availability, but it would come as no surprise if Harper's name was found in the batting order as the Nationals' three-hole hitter come the postseason. Harper will make every effort possible to help his team advance to the National League Championship Series — a feat the Nationals have vet to achieve.

Following the final regular-season games of 2017 Sunday, Oct. 1, catch the start of the MLB postseason with the American League and National League wild card games Tuesday, Oct. 3, on ESPN, and Wednesday, Oct. 4. on TBS.

Hard to beat

Culinary TV stars step up to challenge Bobby Flay

Bobby Flay in "Beat Bobby Flay" Bv Andrew Warren TV Media

Whether it's been in "Iron Chef America," "Worst Cooks in America" or "Throwdown with Bobby Flay," the acclaimed chef's many appearances have made it pretty clear that there are at least two things that he loves in the world: cooking and competition. Sure, he has "Brunch at Bobby's" and the new "Bobby and Damaris Show," in which he gets to show off his less hectic side, but Flay's on-screen persona was built on competition, and he thrives under the pressure that it brings.

That's where Food Network's "Beat Bobby Flay" comes in. It's a series with a purpose: to pit Flay against other chefs in one-on-one culinary contests — contests that Flav wins far more often than he loses.

This week's new episode, airing Thursday, Oct. 5, has some fun Halloween twists in store for Flay and his challengers. The first round always features two chefs competing to see which one gets to go up against Flay, and this week two challengers who aren't strangers to the TV camera are front and center. Food Network star Giada De Laurentiis ("Giada in Italy") goes head-to-head with longtime

The Chew" co-host Daphne Oz. They each have to cook a tasty dish with an ingredient chosen by Flay, and once those are judged, only one challenger gets to move forward.

In the second round, the cards favor the challenger. The winner of that first round gets to choose a dish — any dish — that both she and Flay need to cook in a limited amount of time. With the deck stacked like that against Flay, you'd think that he'd lose more often than not — but it's the opposite that happens. Three judges taste the dishes blind, not knowing which chef cooked which, and somehow Flay pulls off a win more often than his challengers.

But that's what makes "Beat Bobby Flay" such good television; it wouldn't be nearly as entertaining if beating him wasn't a challenge, after all. Flay loves the competition, and "Beat Bobby Flay" is him in his element. This week's new episode airs Thursday, Oct. 5, on Food Network.

'Curb Your Enthusiasm' returns from a long hiatus

By Andrew Warren

TV Media

Paused, not curbed: Don't keep that enthusiasm clamped down: embrace it. HBO's "Curb Your Enthusiasm" is back from a six-year hiatus, with its ninth season returning Sunday, Oct. 1.

The comedy went on an indefinite hiatus after its eighth season wrapped up in 2011 but was never officially canceled — a fate that, for many shows, winds up being no different than an official cancellation. Not so for the Larry David-helmed series, for which "hiatus" actually meant — well — hiatus.

Comedian David ("Fridays"), who co-created the '90s hit "Seinfeld," returns to star as a fictionalized version of himself navigating the minutiae of dayto-day life. Cheryl Hines ("Suburgatory") stars as David's wife, Cheryl, and Jeff Garlin ("The Goldbergs") as his manager, Jeff. Beyond the core stars, though, it's the guest stars that really make the show — "Curb Your Enthusiasm" has always relied heavily on a who's who of Hollywood.

This season has a strong lineup ready to go. Jimmy Kimmel ("Jimmy Kimmel Live!"), Nick Offerman ("Parks and Recreation"), Elizabeth Banks ("The Hunger Games," 2012), Lauren Graham ("Gilmore Girls"), Carrie Brownstein ("Portlandia"), Ed Begley Jr. ("St. Elsewhere"), Elizabeth Perkins ("Weeds") and Nasim Pedrad ("New Girl") all have laugh-out-loud roles this season.

Unlike a traditional sitcom, "Curb Your Enthusiasm" doesn't use a strict script in the traditional sense. Instead, David writes an outline of the scenes and plot and the actors improvise much of their dialogue. It's an unconventional formula that has won the series a huge fan base and buckets of accolades: the critically acclaimed series has been nominated for 39 Emmys over the years, winning two.

"Curb Your Enthusiasm" may have been on hiatus for six long years, but it wasn't curbed — only paused. The new season premieres Sunday, Oct. 1 on HRO

The truth is funny: Stop me if you've heard this one before. An agent with a skeptical mind and a belief that all things paranormal can be explained away by science and rationality is partnered with his polar opposite: a true believer, someone who relishes the unexplained and the unexplainable.

No, it isn't "The X-Files," although the description fits that show perfectly. Instead, it's "Ghosted," a new series that's a riff on the formula, premiering on "The X-Files'" home network, Fox, Sunday, Oct. 1.

Created by series stars Craig Robinson ("The Office") and Adam Scott ("Parks and Recreation"), with executive producer Tom Gormican, "Ghosted" features Robinson's Leroy Wright, a skeptic, getting paired up with Scott's Max Jennifer, a genius true believer, by a secret government agency. Together they investigate paranormal activity in and around Los Angeles.

Unlike "The X-Files," which takes its far-fetched subject matter rather seriously, "Ghosted" takes the opposite tack — it's a comedy. The conflict between the believer and the skeptic is played up for laughs, as the duo uncovers a mystery of global proportions that may be threatening the entire planet. Amber Stevens West ("The Carmichael Show"), Ally Walker ("Sons of Anarchy") and Adeel Akhtar ("The Big Sick," 2017) also star alongside the two leading men.

On the surface, it may sound like "The X-Files," but "Ghosted" is anything but a clone. Catch the premiere Sunday, Oct. 1 Laughs next door: Most people get along with their families pretty well, barring the occasional flare-up. Lots of families are pretty close — but how close is too close? That's the question posed in "9JKL," a new Monday night comedy premiering Oct. 2 on CBS.

Created by and starring Mark Feuerstein ("Royal Pains"), the series is inspired by events that actually happened in the actor's life. He plays Josh, a man whose apartment is a bit too close to those of his family members. He lives in apartment 9K, with his mother, Judy (Linda Lavin, "Sean Saves the World"), and father, Harry (Elliott Gould, "Ray Donovan"), living right next door in apartment 9J.

That's already pretty close for comfort—after all, a grown man needs his space from mom and dad. But it gets worse. His other next-door neighbors are also family. Over in apartment 9L are his brother, Andrew (David Walton, "New Girl"), his sister-in-law, Eve (Liza Lapira, "Super Fun Night"), and their newborn baby. Matt Murray ("Rookie Blue") and Albert Tsai ("Dr. Ken") also star in the comedy.

The concept and plenty of the laughs are ripped straight from Feuerstein's experiences while shooting "Royal Pains." Although he was living in an apartment with his wife, Dana Klein (who serves as an executive producer for "9JKL"), he plays a divorced actor in the series, but the experience of living so close to both his parents and his brother is true to

Late Laughs

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

It was announced today that President Trump is ending the DACA program and may deport immigrants who came to the U.S. decades ago. Many people are outraged, while Melania is like, "Well, rules are rules, so see ya!"

A lot of celebrity babies are happening right now. It was just announced that Prince William and Kate Middleton are expecting their third child. Kate's very excited about the baby. In fact, she said she can already feel it waving.

I saw that Mark Zuckerberg and his wife just had their second daughter, and they wrote her a letter where they tell her not to worry about the future. Then their new baby was like, "Yeah, my dad founded Facebook — I'm definitely not worried about the future!"

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Donald Trump did more things today. For instance, he traveled to North Dakota to talk tax reform. And by "talk tax reform," I mean rambled incoherently until they turned his mic off.

Another hurricane, Irma, is bearing down on Florida. It's the largest Atlantic hurricane ever reported. Experts say it's the size of France. Hey! This is America! We measure things in Delawares.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Donald Trump decided to end DACA — a program that protects young undocumented immigrants from being deported. So now this means a lot of immigrants may get sent back to their native countries. When she heard this, Melania said, "I volunteer as tribute."

The immigrants who have benefited from DACA are called Dreamers. Sessions explained that the kids will still be Dreamers, but in more of a "Nightmare on Elm Street" sort of way.

Jimmy Kimmel Live

We were off work for two weeks. It's interesting. When we left, we were busy reliving the Civil War, and now we're back with a good old-fashioned Korean war. So who says we're not making progress?

This morning, our president woke up and asked his staff, "Now that the hurricane is over, what's something horrible I can do to distract people from the Russia investigation?" And someone said, "You know, there are 800,000 innocent kids you could deport for no good reason." And he said, "Done and done!"
